NAZI PLANES BOMB PARIS SUBURBS: MASS ATTACK ON FRANCE LOOMING

195 Are Killed Or Wounded In Raid On City

Six Waves Of German Warplanes Bomb Open Western Section Of French Capital

By PERCY NOEL
British United Press. Exclusive Cable to The Edmonton Bulletin.

PARIS, June 3.—Six waves of German bombers swept over Paris today. At least 45 persons were killed and 150 wounded. The raid followed Nazi attacks on southern France on Saturday, and French reprisals in the Ruhr area on Sunday.

At least 15 German planes were brought down by French pursuit planes and anti-aircraft guns during the raid. An air ministry communique said the raiders were engaged in a "furious combat" by French planes".

Over 1,000 high explosive and incendiary bombs were dropped, mostly in the industrial suburbs in the western section of the capital. Several bombs struck a school, serving as a temporary hospital, killing some nurses.

Dense columns of smoke, shot through with flames, hung over the industrial area, but although damage was considerable, the raid was not considered very effective.

A bomb fell through the ceiling of a building where Minister of Air Laurent Eynac was giving a formal luncheon. The bomb also narrowly missed the United States ambassador, William C. Bullitt, one of the guests, by less than 10 feet, it was reported. He was not injured.

Raid Carried Out By 155 Planes

The raid was carried out by 155 German bombing planes, including bombers that used a new "siren bomb" which made a weird whistling noise.

French airplanes and anti-aircraft guns vigorously counter-attacked the German planes, some of them fighting air battles over the city.

The German bombers, apparently aiming at air fields and other military objectives around Paris, dropped most of their bombs in the western part of the city, far from any military objective.

Officials said that casualties were uncertain but that a number had been reported. Two were killed when one bomb hit a seven-storey apartment house in an aristocratic section. A huge column of smoke rose from a factory in the suburbs and I saw four other fires started by bombs.

Bombers, in five waves of 25 each plus one wave of 30 planes, were forced to keep at a high altitude—around 20,000 feet—and it proved impossible for them to aim bombs accurately at military objectives from that height.

Whenever the planes came lower they were fiercely attacked by French fighters.

Destruction was reported from 12 widely scattered places as a result of the poor aim of the Germans.

Sentries Ordered To Shoot Pedestrians Who Fail To Heed Orders

By WALLACE CARROLL
British United Press Exclusive Cable to The Edmonton Bulletin

LONDON, June 3—Government authorities have ordered sentries to shoot pedestrians who approach airdromes and war factories except by authorized entrances, it was disclosed today, and two men have been killed already for failing to heed orders to halt.

The ministry of information bulletin was published today warning the public of the shoot-to-kill order.

Pedestrians who approach airdromes and war factories even by authorized entrances must be prepared to identify themselves.

IDENTITY SECRET

One man, it was revealed, was killed on a road yesterday and one near a Royal Air Force camp for failing to heed sentries' orders to halt. The identity of the man was kept secret.

A grammar school teacher at Cheltenham was wounded when, in musketry practise by a local defense corps, of which he was a member, live ammunition was used accidentally instead of blanks.

A tightening of internal defense was noticeable as the last of the British expeditionary force in Belgium and its French and Belgian allies poured across the

BIG NUMBERS ALLIED TROOPS ARRIVE HOME

Battle Raging Just Three Miles From Embarkation Point

By F. H. FISHER
British United Press Exclusive Cable to The Edmonton Bulletin

AT A SOUTHEAST ENGLISH PORT, June 3. — Allied soldiers arrived in large groups from Flanders today and reported the Germans have driven to within three miles of Dunkerque in a violent battle with the French rear guard.

British Tommies and French Poilus stepped off fighting boats and warships on which they had just been evacuated from Dunkerque and reported a terrific battle was raging just three miles from the sandy beaches where embarkation is taking place.

"The Germans were only three miles from the beach when we left," one British soldier said. "The French were attacking them like mad and fighting magnificently."

ARRIVALS SWELL

Evacuation arrivals had slowed to a trickle during the night. But with early morning the arrivals swelled again to large proportions as troops which had been placed aboard ships during the night began to arrive.

During the night hours, it was revealed, new rescue ships and Allied war vessels steamed up to the Dunkerque beaches and even into the wrecked harbor, took aboard full loads of troops and raced back to England.

German air attacks, the arriving troops said, lessened in intensity during the night, which was described as "comparatively peaceful" in contrast with the previous terrific barrage. However, guns of the German land forces kept up an unceasing barrage. Even so casualties were reported to have been surprisingly small.

One paddle-steamer ordinarily employed in excursions on the British coast, arrived from Dunkerque with its flag at half-mast. It bore Allied dead.

ATTACK ON ROWBOAT

A Royal Artillery sergeant described a new German attack method employed against an open rowboat loaded with British soldiers. A plane dropped bombs and machine gunned the boat without effect. Then it spilled oil or gasoline on the water, he said, and used tracer bullets to set it afire.

The rowboat managed to cut through the inferno to the side of a rescue transport.

Dunkerque was described by the latest arrivals as a mass of fires. Hardly a house or building close to the waterfront was left.

The troops now in the defence lines around Dunkerque was said to be largely French but some Scots were at their side.

British Heroes Uphold Army Tradition

Fighting the most heroic rearguard action in history, the British Expeditionary Force in Flanders upheld the highest traditions of the British army as they slowly withdrew to the Belgium coast to be picked up by boats and be returned to England. Trapped and encircled the British, French and fragments of the dismembered Belgian army fought their way out of the ring of steel being forged around them by the Germans. British Tommies from the "Hell" of Flanders are pictured as they arrived at an English port aboard a destroyer.

French Poilus In London From Flanders "Hell"

Freed from the Nazi trap in Belgium and northern France, these French troops were photographed marching through London after arriving from the channel port where they disembarked after a fierce crossing from the European mainland. With every available vessel pressed into service, including ferries and pleasure launches, the Royal Navy is reported to have succeeded in evacuating at least 150,000 troops from the Flanders "Hell".

Airmen to Proceed Overseas Monthly To Serve in R.A.F.

OTTAWA, June 3.—A steady flow of Canadian pilots and subsequently of aircrews generally, will proceed overseas monthly to serve with the Royal Air Force, James S. Duncan of Toronto, acting deputy minister of national defence for air, told the joint service club of Ottawa today.

Mr. Duncan said fighter and bomber planes ready for immediate action have been despatched abroad. More will follow.

The address of the acting deputy minister for air was broadcast over the national network of the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation. He was followed by Honorary Air Vice Marshal William A. Bishop, V.C., who warned against "defeatism" and said "we must always possess an unshakeable confidence."

NEED IS URGENT

While Canada would proceed with the British Commonwealth air training plan framework, the needs of the moment called for every effort toward the maximum output of air personnel in the shortest time for service overseas, said Mr. Duncan.

Detailing measures taken to speed up Canada's part in the war, he said:

"The 118 Squadrons is under notice to proceed abroad. The advance party left Ottawa on May 20 and have arrived in England.

"Further air force contributions complete with aircraft, guns and wireless equipment are now standing by ready to proceed overseas.

"A number of young pilots just graduated from Camp Borden and who, under other circumstances,

Hungary Felt Moving Troops To Aid Germany

British United Press Exclusive Cable to The Edmonton Bulletin

BUDAPEST, Hungary, June 3.—Hungary today began a large scale transfer of troops from the southeast and west to the northeast, where Russian troop movements have been reported along the Carpatho-Russian border.

The fact that the troops were moved from the vicinity of the German and Jugoslav frontiers—Germany on the west and Jugoslavia on the southwest—was believed to emphasize Hungary's military co-operation with Berlin and Rome.

Hitler's North Army Turns For Drive To South

Nazi High Command Reported Massing Tanks, Artillery And Infantry On Oise-Aisne-Argonne Front

LONDON, June 3.—An authoritative source said tonight that the withdrawal of British and French forces from northern France is still going on. Those taken out by the French navy were reported to be now in France and it was extremely difficult to give even an estimate of the number brought out in the dual withdrawal.

By RALPH HEINZEN
British United Press. Exclusive Cable to The Edmonton Bulletin.

PARIS, June 3.—French reconnaissance planes reported today that the German army of the north, totalling some 600,000 men, was executing a gigantic turning movement and it was reported here that the German high command was massing tanks, artillery and infantry on the Oise-Aisne-Argonne front as its next step in a desperate attempt to bring the war to a quick end.

French air squadrons were sent out to bomb roads and troop concentrations, points behind and in the path of the German northern army.

Gen. Maxime Weygand, Allied generalissimo, was reported to have made his troop dispositions in readiness to meet an attack on the Oise-Aisne-Argonne front within from 48 to 72 hours.

Possibly as the preliminary to an all-out bombardment, in preparation for mass attack, the Germans increased the tempo of their heavy gun fire between Reibel and Sedan at the eastern part of this front in the Argonne hills.

Two minor German attacks, of local nature, against French advanced outposts in front of the Canada "On Own" Begins Blitzkrieg Of War Production

By GRANT DEXTER
Edmonton Bulletin Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA, June 3.—Three weeks of blitzkrieg have shattered Canada's well-laid war plans as completely as an earthquake changes the face of the earth.

Where does Canada stand today with respect to vital supplies of war—airplanes, army engines, tanks, ammunition, machine guns and the other items in the armory of modern war?

This is our position:

For nine months Canada has played the role of junior partner to Great Britain. Our war program was designed to supplement Britain's war program. In the main we were to buy from Britain much of the equipment, without which armies today are impotent. Britain believed until three weeks ago that she could produce all the equipment required by herself and Canada.

CALL FOR HELP

Then on the morrow of the break through came swift re-assessment by Britain of her capacity and her own immediate vital needs. First Canada was told that Britain no longer could carry through her part in the air training plan—requiring all her production of planes, engines and other flying equipment for herself. Then she asked Canada for all the fighting equipment we have. As the British government said, one plane today was worth ten planes six months hence. And so it was all along the line.

Thus the plans of nine months were blown to the winds. There came only one sentence of advice from Britain to Canada—do the best you can, on your own. It was with this in mind that Hon. J. L. Ralston, minister of finance, rose

STOCKHOLM, June 3.—Dispatches from the region of the Norwegian are port of Narvik today reported fighting around Bjornefjell, a few miles from the Swedish border.

LONDON, June 3.—The air ministry announced today that formations of heavy Royal Air Force bombers "attacked enemy airdromes and other military objectives in northwest Germany." All R.A.F. planes returned.

200 MEN WILL BE TRAINED TO BUILD AIRCRAFT

In an effort to expedite construction of aircraft as part of Canada's contribution to the war, 200 trainees for aircraftsmen will be immediately enrolled, it was announced Monday by Dr. G. Fred McNally, deputy minister of education and chairman of the Alberta Youth Training Council.

One hundred will be from this city and 100 from Calgary.

The appeal by Hon. C. D. Howe, minister of supply, that airplane construction be speeded up to 24 hours a day, will result in heavy demands on skilled mechanics and there is a shortage. It is planned to have other trainees ready when the need for them arises.

Sheet metal workers and welders are the class mostly needed at present.

Students enrolled here will attend the Diesel engine training school at Jasper avenue and 114 street. Regulations restrict applications to persons from 18 to 30 years although a limited number over 30 years will be accepted.

There will be free tuition while tools and other equipment will be supplied.

These courses will comprise 600 hours of instruction in a three months period.

Dutch Queen Not Going To East Indies

FUSILIERS TO BE MOBILIZED IN SOUTH UNIT

City Regiment Will Form Part Of South Alberta Battalion

CALGARY, June 3—Six Alberta non-permanent active militia units, including the Calgary Regiment (Tank), will form the South Alberta Regiment in the 4th Division C.A.S.F., it was announced yesterday after a conference of officers commanding the units.

Units comprising the regiment will be 2nd Cavalry Brigade, under Col. E. A. Pitman, Chauvin; 19th Alberta Dragoons, under Lt.-Col. M. H. Wright, M.M., Calgary; Edmonton Fusiliers, under Lt.-Col. H. S. Davies, Edmonton; 13th Alberta Light Horse, under Lt.-Col. H. V. Strachan, V.C., Calgary; Calgary Regiment (Tank), under Lt.-Col. M. K. Jull, Calgary; South Alberta Regiment, under Lt.-Col. G. Elder, Medicine Hat.

The Alberta regiment, when recruiting is completed, will be trained in Edmonton, Lt.-Col. E. Brown, M.M., Area Commandant, stated. Recruiting order is being drafted and will be issued within the next few days.

The make-up was approved by conference of the six O.C.'s and Brigadier C. E. Connolly, officer commanding Military District 13, Calgary.

Each unit will form a company of the regiment, and will recruit its men from its own recruiting areas, so that the entire province will be represented in the regiment. No action was taken in naming an officer commanding. Recruiting orders are now being drafted and will be issued in the next few days.

South France Bombing Said Move To Influence Quick Entry Of Il Duce

CANADA ACTS ON HER OWN IN NEW CRISIS

in the commons at the height of the crisis last week and said that Canadians were noted for initiative and resourcefulness. Now, he said, is the time to show those qualities.

Today your correspondent made a survey of Canada's actual and planned production for war. The idea is to answer that question—where do we stand? The information in every instance comes from official sources.

Canada right now is producing 1,000 airplane frames per year. One half are frames for fighting planes and are being shipped as rapidly as they are completed to Britain.

SPEEDING UP

This production is being stepped up to 1,600 as rapidly as possible and may reach 2,000 next year. The original plan called for 1,800 next year, but this will be exceeded possibly by 25 per cent. The other half of these machines are training planes. Details of this production cannot be given for obvious reasons but fighting craft means airplanes now being used by Britain against the enemy.

All accessories for these planes are either being produced in Canada or will be in the near future—meaning within three or four months.

No aero engines are produced in Canada. The argument used by the British and United States producers has been that it is speedier and much cheaper to extend existing plants in the United States than to build new plants in Canada.

FAST DELIVERY

When Britain's decision wrecked the air training plan, last week, Hon. C. D. Howe got into an airplane, flew to New York and boarded between 4,500 and 5,000 aero engines to be delivered more rapidly than Britain would have delivered them under the air training scheme. The frames we will make for ourselves. Obviously so great an order could not have been filled without the good will of the United States government. The report here is that Premier King telephoned to Washington, in advance of Mr. Howe's flight. Thus the air training plan was not only saved but greatly accelerated. The one vital change in it is that instead of training instructors at the outset.

To assure a huge production of airmen later on, Britain urgently needs the airmen as fast as they can be trained. The intention to begin building up a large staff of instructors has, in consequence, been abandoned.

The cost of the engines bought in the United States will approximate $150,000,000. The whole air training scheme was to cost $600,000,000, of which Canada was to pay half, and the balance was to be divided between Britain, Australia and New Zealand. Britain was paying her share in engines and equipment. It is plain that her share accounted for most of the $300,000,000 not being paid by Canada. This country has now made the commitment to fill the gap left by Britain's withdrawal and while nobody knows who will pay this additional sum, the Canadian government has given the order and it will probably fall on this country—boosting the war budget to above one billion dollars.

With respect to tanks, the Canadian government has been trying to get into production since July, 1939. Light tanks as distinct from armored cars which carry Bren guns and other equipment weigh 30 tons and cost $40,000 each. Heavy tanks weigh 60 tons. The big German tanks are 60 tons, not 70 tons, in weight. British plans for a heavy tank were completed after the war broke out. Copies came here but were not given when the first products failed to stand up in field trials. New plans have not been completed and the chances are that Canada will adopt United States tanks as models, even though they are 26 tons instead of 30 tons and are different in design in other respects.

CAN MAKE ENGINES

Surveys prove Canada lacks only two of the materials used in producing these machines—armor plate and large diesel engines. It is believed the engines can be made here and the plate imported from the United States. These tanks will be produced in the Angus shops of the C.P.R. which are awaiting plans and specifications right now. Diesel engines are now made in British Columbia and the plant there should be able to produce the type of engine required.

Canada's Bren gun plant will be in full production next week. The delay, since April, has been due to a change in the design of the gun made by the British producers. The change has been adopted here, thus delaying production six weeks.

Canada's capacity to produce small ammunition has been doubled since the outbreak of war from 30 to 60 million rounds and is now being increased ten times over at breakneck speed. All the machinery to do this was ordered months ago and is now being assembled.

BUILD FIELD GUNS

Canada possesses one large armament plant, a branch of a world famous armament company, which is producing 25 pounder guns as well as the larger calibres. There is no intention of trying to produce large naval guns, but all field calibres including anti-aircraft guns are within the capacity of this plant.

Canadian plants were tooled to now is up to win the war.

EDEN STATES FOUR-FIFTHS TROOPS SAVED

War Secretary Declares B.E.F. Spirit Wins Through

LONDON, June 3.—Anthony Eden, war secretary, told the Empire yesterday that "we have saved more than four-fifths of the troops which the Germans said they had surrounded" in Flanders.

Mr. Eden said "Germany has made great strategic gains," and that "the loss to us has been heavy," but declared "there is another side."

The "gallant defence" in the north, he said, had drawn away German forces from other Allied forces that were dangerously exposed.

NAVIES CO-OPERATE

"It is the spirit of the B.E.F that has won through," he said.

He credited the Allied navies with magnificent and untiring co-operation, through which they had been able to embark more than four-fifths of the troops which Germany claimed to have surrounded.

"The Germans, despite the huge losses which we know they have suffered, have failed in their object to surround and annihilate the British forces," Mr. Eden said. "It is this refusal to accept defeat that is the guarantee of final victory."

But brave hearts alone cannot stand up against steel. He bespoke the co-operation of the entire nation, industrially and civilly, in prosecuting the war.

Mr. Eden, in a broadcast lasting only a few minutes, acknowledged that Britain has suffered great losses in men and material which had been destroyed.

"All accounts," he said, "show that the B.E.F. took a toll from the enemy far in excess of that suffered by themselves."

The return of the troops to England had been accomplished with "little confusion and few losses."

PRAISES CONDUCT

He recapitulated some specific encounters of British military detachments, praising their conduct and military efficiency under difficult circumstances.

Also On the Italian side of the mountains are paths and military roads converge into narrow spaces, exposing an army to deadly concentrated fire. The French Alpine roads, however, spread out, giving a very broad front. The French with a much smaller body of troops than the Italians thus would have the advantage. They could concentrate or disperse at will and could bring far more artillery to bear on the enemy.

It would seem improbable that the Italians could penetrate southeastern France without heavy German help. Wrather Germany can spare the troops, and above all the equipment, for the difficulties of an Alpine offensive, as Italy's ally is sizeable. Obviously difficult toward Paris from the north, is questionable. Many divisions of French troops would have to be held in the Alpine territory however, if Italy declared war, in readiness for any eventuality. This fact would decrease the number of French troops able to face the Germans in the north, to the advantage of Germany. The Germans thus would be getting certain gains from Italy's entrance into the war. But the eventual gain to Italy must still be counted as some uncertainties within the inner Fascist circles.

produce spells and shell casings. Full details of the new plants are forthcoming from the British government until the last few days. Now those plans are working at full on a maximum production basis.

Our capacity to turn out explosives is being increased almost as rapidly as our capacity to produce small ammunition. In this field, we are producing explosives to meet both British and French demands. The Allies prefer different kinds of explosives.

Apart from the highly mechanized equipment goes, Canada is already in mass production. This is true of trucks and of universal carriers which many people mistake for tanks.

TWO OTHER FACTORS

There are two other factors in the situation.

It is probably true, as suggested in the commons last week, that Canadian troops in Canada have not got sufficient ammunition for target practice. It is certainly true that Canadians cannot see, in their own army, any of the vital equipment here dealt with. It is suggested that the reason for this lack of equipment, ammunition and tanks, should be obvious to anyone who reads a newspaper and appreciates Britain's present position.

All this means that the cost of Canada's war program is mounting upward very rapidly. Indeed, it is plain that cost has not been considered. Canada has gone on the bond in every direction for fighting equipment on the machinery to make it. A war outlay this fiscal year, estimated at $700,000,000 on May 15, is now above $800,000,000 within a week and is now, for certain, above $1,000,000,000. Some of this increase may be paid by Britain. Nobody knows and, for that matter, nobody cares. The plans have been scrapped and Canada, out on her own for the first time in this war, is exemporizing a war program without reference to dollars and cents. All that really matters channel in more than 300 abutting transports, protected by a hundred-odd Allied warships.

It is taken for granted in London that Britain's efforts to conciliate Italy have failed completely and that Italy would enter the war soon.

PEACE OFFER

It was forecast that Italy might enter within a few days, possibly after making a peace "offer"—on Germany's terms—and that Adolf Hitler might contemplate making an attack on Britain.

It was taken for granted also that Hitler would order a new frontal attack on France's Somme-Aisne-Oise-Argonne-Maginot front at some selected point. Estimates as to the zero hour for this attack varied. Some experts suggested that it might take another three weeks to organize his attack on the French front.

Experts predicted that Germany would attack the British Isles at several points, by parachute troops, submarines and motor-torpedo boats, with a possible fleet of amphibian tanks.

There was some belief that Premier Benito Mussolini would announce to a Fascist grand council meeting tomorrow his decision to enter the war.

An Italian entrance this week, it was suggested, would divert Allied attention to the Mediterranean and give Hitler the opportunity to readjust his supply lines, replenish ammunition and fuel and reorganize depleted infantry and tank units in Flanders for an attack on France.

The general feeling seemed to be that the Allies would meet an Italian attack resolutely and that they would make no more attempts to conciliate Mussolini.

Garment Workers Oust Communists

NEW YORK, June 3.—The International Ladies Garment Workers Union convention today adopted a resolution to purge its Canadian locals of officers who are Communists, because of the war.

The resolution, introduced by Local 92 of Toronto, authorized the union executive board to take any action it saw fit to oust Communists. The union has about 7,000 members in Canada.

Sailor Gives Tommy A Hand

Untold feats of heroism and self-sacrifice were enacted during the evacuation of British, French and Belgian troops from the coast of Belgium and northern France. A naval petty officer is shown assisting a wounded soldier up the gangway of a destroyer at an unidentified French port during the evacuation. French troops may be seen behind.

Fleet Evacuates Flanders Troops

Under the protection of the Royal Navy and the Royal Air Force, Britain's "bum-boat armada," consisting of every conceivable type of ship, is reported to have succeeded in evacuating all but one division of the 175,000 British troops fighting in Flanders. Weary but not downhearted this hatless and dishevelled member of the B.E.F. stands with his comrades as they arrived safely in London.

GERMAN BOMBS KILL, WOUND 150 IN PARIS

The raid on Paris was the first against any belligerent capital, although German planes previously had approached close to the city.

The luncheon given by Synac and interrupted by the crash of a German bomb through the ceiling was resumed at another place when the raid ended.

The American ambassador and others at the luncheon were showered with flying glass as every window in the building was shattered.

Half a million French school children were entering their classrooms as first wave of German bombers arrived over Paris. The children were herded to underground shelters and suffered no casualties.

I watched the bombing of Paris from the highest point of the city, Alop Montmartre (the hill on the right bank of the Seine river) I saw flames and smoke from bombs bursting at points over a five-mile area.

At least 20 bombs fell on the western edge of the city, Observers behind Le Bourget Field on the northern edge of Paris. I counted five different fires, marked by columns of smoke.

During the raid, I passed several schools from which children were marching out in good order to air raid shelters. Some of them sang the Marseillaise.

Nowhere was there any sign of panic, but everywhere there was anger on the faces of the French.

Roosevelt Talks With W. C. Bullitt

WASHINGTON, June 3—President Roosevelt talked to Ambassador William C. Bullitt by telephone today and received a first hand account of Bullitt's narrow escape from a German bomb attack on Paris.

The ambassador, the White House said, told Mr. Roosevelt that God was with him. He described how a bomb came through the ceiling of the room in which he was lunching and landed near him.

When the air raid alarm sounded Bullitt reported that those present moved elsewhere and finished the luncheon.

35 Civilians Are Believed Killed

LONDON, June 3. — An exchange Telegraph dispatch from Paris today said it was believed about 35 civilians had been killed in the German air raid. Six Italian man planes were reported shot down.

German Planes In South France

PARIS, June 3—Continued excursions by German bombing and reconnaissance squadrons into southeastern France and in the Paris zone were reported today by a military spokesman who declined to give details of the results.

The spokesman, echoing views expressed yesterday by the Havas-Fradin News Agency, expressed belief that the display of German air activity in southeast France had a "political significance."

French commentators had suggested that raids on the Rhone valley over the weekend, which at least 56 persons were killed and 100 injured, were carried out to impress Italy with the ability of the German air force to assist on a possible new southern front.

Swiss Fighters Down Bomber

BERNE, June 3.—Swiss fighting planes Sunday shot down a German bomber—the third in 24 hours—at the Nazi air force continued what the Swiss general staff described as "grave violations of the sovereign territory of the confederation."

The incursions were coincident with massed German bombing raids from the Rhine valley against the industrial region of the Rhone valley in France.

The first two Nazi planes were brought down Saturday afternoon, one within sight of the Swiss capital. The one destroyed today was returning from a Rhone valley raid.

Soviet Newspaper Says Main Allied Forces Unbeaten

MOSCOW, June 3.—The newspaper "Machine Building" in a review of war operations on the western front said Sunday that "German victories are considerable but it would be a mistake to presume that they already mean an ending of the war."

"The war potential of the Allies still is great and, also, their main forces are not defeated yet," the newspaper said.

Joseph Schenck Indicted For Tax Evasion

NEW YORK, June 3.—Joseph Schenck, board chairman and executive director in charge of production of the 20th Century-Fox Film Corporation, was indicted by a federal grand jury today on 24 counts of income tax fraud, conspiracy, and making false statements to a government investigator.

Schenck's bookkeeper, Joseph Moscovelli, was named a co-defendant.

Two indictments specified that Schenck had defrauded the government of more than $400,000 in taxes from 1935 to 1937.

Maginot line east of the Moselle were taken for attempts to divert attention from the northern army's turning movement.

Germany opened a furious attack on the 200 transports and 100 warships evacuating the Allied northern army from Dunkerque.

The Germans were sowing thousands of mines in the Channel, in the evacuation path, while their planes attacked transports and shelled the guns shelled men on the Dunkerque beach. Swift motor-torpedo boats raced into the Channel from Belgian ports, where they have been taken overland, to attack the evacuation fleet.

NAZI BOATS SUNK

It was asserted officially that an "important" number of these boats had been sunk and that the evacuation proceeded normally.

This morning's high command communique, No. 547 of the war, was the briefest, perhaps, since the German blitzkrieg started, and was reminiscent of the early quiet days before:

"There was no new development throughout the night."

German combat planes were reported unusually active in the Rethel-Sedan sector, especially trying to keep French reconnaissance planes from observing troop movements or preparations behind the German lines on the Oise-Aisne-Argonne front.

FRANCE COUNTS LOSSES

France meanwhile counted her losses from two consecutive days of German air raids which ranged down into southeastern France as far as Marseilles, second largest French city, where 30 were killed.

More than 50 dead and 100 injured was the toll of Saturday and Sunday bombings which cost the Nazis 12 planes in France and three brought down by Swiss defence forces.

The French press, awaiting Premier Mussolini's meeting with the Italian cabinet tomorrow, speculated on whether Il Duce might issue a "war or peace" ultimatum. Newspapers were agreed that Italy's hour to act was near.

Savage Attacks On Dunkerque Renewed

PARIS, June 3—German land, sea and air forces renewed savage attacks on Dunkerque today, military spokesman said.

The Nazi attack failed, however, to halt the withdrawal operations, largely due to the work of the British and French air force, which covered the evacuss successfully.

The Allied planes again shot down large numbers of German fighters, bombed lines of communication and strafed the swift torpedo-carrying launches with which the Germans have been attacking transports.

MIGHT BE LULL

While French and British troops entrenched in Dunkerque fought a "last ditch" battle against increasingly intense German infantry assaults, military commentators here expressed belief there might be a lull lasting anywhere from three days to two weeks before the Nazi machine is ready for another big assault.

They pointed out that the 40 German divisions which forced the Allied northern army to the sea had suffered tremendous losses on land and in the air.

The emergency withdrawal from besieged Dunkerque was nearly at an end as a fleet of 200 or more Allied warships and merchantmen of every description sailed in and out in a steady stream ferrying the last troops to safety.

While the rescue ships arrived, took on their passengers and steamed away again, German infantry, attacking shield-deep through Dunkerque's flooded marshes toward the city were blasted back by a barrage of artillery fire from the Allies covering the retreat, and waiting hopefully for the appearance of the

GERMANS DROP TWO BOMBS IN SOUTH ENGLAND

LONDON, June 3—Two bombs were dropped today at Forest Row, Sussex, in southern England and caused some damage.

The bombs left craters several yards wide and damaged nearby buildings.

Shortly before the explosions, the inhabitants were awakened by the roar of an airplane.

One woman was reported injured by flying glass.

The bombs fell near a boys' school but the only damage consisted of broken windows.

A joint communique by the air ministry and ministry of home security said: "An unidentified aircraft dropped two bombs in the country district of Sussex early this morning. No casualties were caused and little damage was done."

Barbara Hutton Gives Ambulances

LOS ANGELES, June 3—Countess Haugwitz Reventlow, the former Barbara Hutton of 3-and-10 millions, confirmed reports today that she had cabled instructions for her London attorneys to provide Red Cross units in England with 10 ambulances for war duty.

Germans Promise Not Hit Washington

BERLIN, June 3. — The United States embassy was assured by the German government today that the United States liner Washington, eastbound to pick up American war refugees, will not be molested by the Nazi navy.

Pope Confers

VATICAN CITY, June 3—Pope Pius XII conferred today with Monsignor Francesco Borgogni Duca, Papal Nuncio to Italy. What the Pontiff discussed with the Nuncio in a private audience in the Pope's library was not disclosed, but some foreign observers presumed their talk concerned the possibility of Italy entering the war.

last units of the army of General Rene Jacques Adolphe Prioux.

PLAYED VITAL PART

It was General Prioux's tanks and armored cars which played a vital part in covering the 40-mile withdrawal from Lille to the sea after King Leopold III's capitulation exposed the Allied northern flank. The remaining units of the Prioux rearguard early today were reported only 15 miles from Dunkerque.

Forced to abandon their tanks because of the flooding of the ground in front of Dunkerque, the Germans were said to be using 15 divisions—200,000 men—in their attempt to overpower the Allied defence forces.

Premier Paul Reynaud, after a visit to the Somme-Aisne line—which at some points is only 70 miles north of Paris, reported the army's morale was "much better" and praised the high command on its defensive organizations, "remarkably adapted to the present phase of the war."

Channel Alive With Boats of All Types As Troops Removed

A SOUTH COAST PORT, England, June 3.—A man who watched the Allied withdrawal from Dunkerque from the deck of a destroyer said yesterday that the scene across the English Channel was one of such vast movement that "It looked as though every craft on the south coast was heading for the beaches to finish off the job."

"There were barges and ferries and yachts and launches and little boats in tow of bigger boats," he said. "And presently up through the middle of them came an overseas convoy from the other side of the world.

"There was somehow about them —their bright red ensigns and their guns cocked up on the sterns—an indescribable jauntiness."

MAY BE TURNING POINT

A naval witness of the evacuation recalled that Friday was the anniversary of the Battle of Jutland, fought in 1916, and observed:

"At the time that battle was fought it looked like anything but victory. Yet we know it sealed the doom of the German fleet in the last war. It may well be that this triumphant extrication of the B.E.F. may prove just such another turning point in this war."

The naval officer depicted the general reaction of the British soldiers as:

"Give us a chance to wash and brush up and get a bit of sleep and...let's go back. We've got Jerry beat."

One group from a Scottish regiment clambered into a destroyer "in the last stages of exhaustion" but could not be restrained from joining in firing at low-flying German planes with volleys from their rifles.

PROUD OF FRENCHMEN

One soldier climbed aboard, tired and tattered—and carrying home for his children a child's spade and bucket he found in Flanders.

A Scottish private pounded a smiling French poilu on the back and swore at length.

"These little so and sos," he roared. "They get in a position and you can't get them out. This lad here would be there yet if we hadn't given him orders.

"Just smiling and shooting they were, and giving Jerry proper hell."

A 70-year-old naval pensioner—James O'Neill—came back from embarking the Allied troops at Dunkerque by motorboat with the comment:

"It was real hell over there."

PLANES NUMEROUS

The old man was suffering shock and exhaustion because of his service with a group of volunteers who crossed to Dunkerque with six motorboats to load troops into transports.

"When we approached the Dunkerque roads German planes were bombing and machine-gunning everything and everybody," he said. "They were like flies in the air. Machine-gun bullets and bombs were falling like hail around the destroyers and other vessels there, and around the troops massed on the sands and waiting to be taken off.

"I drove my boat ashore to the nearest group. I'm licensed to carry only 12 passengers. I had three or four times 12 in my boat, besides their equipment. And before I could say Jack Robinson others came in with their rifles and tin hats and tried to scramble in.

"But we had to tell them to wait for the return. We had to be cruel to be kind.

BOMBERS OVERHEAD

"All the time Jerry was roaring overhead, dropping his bombs and machine-gun bullets. After putting the men on warships we dashed back for more. Each time we returned men were waiting, some up to their waists in water. We hauled them in, always loading nearly to the sinking point.

"It was really hell over there. But our boys are all cheerful and still full of fight and waiting to have another go at Jerry—and so am I."

"O'Neil added that his motorboat was sunk by the wash of two British destroyers on his seventh trip just before dark, but "luckily we were able to wade ashore. As I had lost my boat and was almost all in myself I was put on a destroyer and brought home."

Describing the scene at Dunkerque, the naval officer said his destroyer approached the French coast early Friday.

"We could see German searchlights wheeling nervously to and fro and suddenly a battery opened fire. Our guns swung around but they were not firing at us. We could see tracer shells soaring upwards, presumably aimed at our coastal bombers.

CHASE BOMBER AWAY

"There was a dull glow of fires along the horizon and 'flaming onions' were bursting into red flares."

As it began to get light a German bomber appeared, he continued, and "Hovered on the edge of dark clouds having a look at us.

"Our shell fire drove him back into cover of the clouds and every time he poked his nose out a desperately accurate barrage drove him away again.

"It was light enough when the destroyer prepared to leave to to see assembled on the whole length of the mole thousands of men of the B.E.F., patiently waiting for embarkation.

"There was a French destroyer already alongside filling up with men. There was a trawler alongside also but she had been sunk by bombs and only her masts and funnel were above water. We went alongside between them, watched by thousands of patient eyes under the strapped brimets. It was nearly

Resurrection Of Pioneer Spirit Is Said Canada Need

REGINA, June 3.—What Canada needs today is a resurrection of the old pioneer spirit, Rt. Rev. John W. Woodside, of Ottawa, moderator of the United Church of Canada, told the congregation of Knox church here last night.

"We have come to an age in this world when we expect too much to be prepared for us," he said. "Unwittingly we have created the impression that the governments everywhere are responsible for our well being. It's tragic. Nothing is so needed in Canada today as a resurrection of the old pioneer spirit that met every challenge as it came with initiative and resource."

Text of War Secretary Eden's Speech

LONDON, June 3.—Following is the text of War Secretary Anthony Eden's broadcast Sunday:

In the battle of the ports which has been raging during the past three weeks, Germany has made great strategic gains. The loss to us in equipment and in material has been heavy; but there is now another side to this picture. The bulk of the British Expeditionary Force has been saved, and quite apart from what the French have done for their own forces, we have been able to bring tens of thousands of our French Allies off with us from Dunkerque.

Nor is this effort ended. Four days ago, not one of us would have dared to hope that the isolated Allied armies could have fought their way through the bottleneck to the coast.

FOUGHT WAY THROUGH

These men have marched hundreds of miles. They have fought countless actions with an enemy that hemmed them in and pressed upon them from three sides.

The German high command proudly announced that they were surrounded. They have fought their way through. How have they achieved the seemingly impossible? Mum's for man, the British troops have proved themselves superior to the Germans whenever they have met them. All accounts show that the British Expeditionary Force took a toll of the enemy greatly in excess of that suffered by themselves. On at least two occasions, at Arras and on the Ypres canal, the losses suffered by the German army were enormous.

So it is that at the last the German plans were foiled, and that despite the surrender of the Belgian army, our own troops and the French Allies with them have fought their way through.

Let me now state the sequence of events. At the call of the King of the Belgians, the B.E.F. advanced into Belgium, and took up its positions on the River Dyle. The advance lasted several days. Through events they could not control, our army had to come back no less than half that time. It did so with little confusion, and with few losses. Seventy-five miles forward, a fight at the end of the advance, and 75 miles back, fighting all the way, all in the space of 10 days.

BRILLIANTLY EXECUTED

That was the first phase of the Battle of the Ports, and it was brilliantly executed. I have a report of one division which had not lost a single straggler on that 150-mile march, and here is a quotation from an account of an eyewitness of our troops on the front:

"No display of drill at Olympia would be smarter than the work of men of our forces that I saw. The feeling of confidence was magnificent."

And so the British expeditionary force found itself back on the Scheldt, with its strength in men and material almost intact, but meanwhile, the German mechanized columns were pouring through the gap to the south, advancing across our lines of communication, biting ever deeper into our back areas.

Desperate efforts were made to stem the tide. Units who had been sent to France to supply some of the much-needed labor behind the lines were thrown into the fight and acquitted themselves splendidly. Others were sent to hold the Channel ports in an effort to keep open communications for the B. E. F.

FLANKS STOOD FIRM

Some troops marched 35 miles in 24 hours. British brigades on the flanks stood firm, despite the enormously extended frontage they had to defend. At one time the expeditionary force of nine divisions was holding a front of 80 miles. They held on, and they fought back.

On the west, British troops defended the narrowing gap to the sea. Day after day the battle continued, and at the end of it they had fought themselves to a standstill, but they held their ground, and by doing so they enabled the remainder of the expeditionary force to get clear.

On the east, corps artillery coming into action against the enemy massing for attack inflicted such heavy casualties that the attack never developed.

The stories of individual exploits at this time are legion: an anti-tank gunner, who knocked out seven tanks; a hero who after knocking out hostile tanks swam a canal to bring back marked maps and other books. But the triumph is not the triumph of individuals, however gallant; it is the triumph of an army.

BRAVEST OF EPICS

There is no braver epic in all our annals. Then, there is the story of the battle of the ports. From the moment of the collapse of the Belgian army, there was only one course left to the Allied armies; to hold the line around Dunkerque, the only port that remained, and to embark as many men as possible before their rear guards were overwhelmed. Thanks to the magnificent and unfailing co-operation of the Allied navies and air forces, we have been able to embark and save more than four-fifths of that British expeditionary force which the Germans claimed to have surrounded. The armies' debt to the royal navy, to the merchant navy and to the royal air force can never be forgotten.

We have been compelled to destroy much valuable material. We have suffered casualties. Once again our ally has to bear the invasion of the sacred soil of France. But the Germans, in spite of the huge losses which we know them to have suffered, have failed in their main object, to surround and annihilate the Allied armies in the north.

The British expeditionary force still exists, not as a handful of refugees, but as a body of seasoned veterans. We have had great losses in equipment, but our men have gained immeasurably in experience of warfare and in self-confidence.

SPIRIT NOT WANTING

The vital weapon of any army is its spirit. Ours has been tried and tempered in the furnace. It has not been found wanting. It is this refusal to accept defeat that is the guarantee of final victory. Our duty in this country is plain. We must make good our losses and we must win this war. To do that, we must profit by the lessons of this battle. Brave hearts alone cannot stand up against steel. We need more planes, more tanks, more guns.

The people of the country must work as never before. We must show the same qualities, the same discipline and the same self-sacrifice at home as the British Expeditionary force have shown in the field.

The nation honors with proud reverence those who fell that their comrades might win through. The innumerable actions, the countless deeds of valor of the last week cannot all be recorded now. Each will have its place in history—soldiers, sailors, airmen who gave their lives to help. Theirs is an immortal memory. Their spirit must be our banner, their sacrifice our spur.

Legion President Denounces German Memorial Bombing

OTTAWA, June 3.—Alex Walker of Calgary, Dominion president of the Canadian Legion, denounced the German destruction of the Canadian memorial on Vimy Ridge last night and said; "The Hun runs true to form."

"The hellish hordes of Germany apparently think that such senseless action will serve to undermine the morale and fighting spirit of the Allied, and, more especially, the Canadian forces," he said. "Nothing since the outbreak of the war has so helped to crystalize Canada's determination to fight to the finish as this maniacal wantage."

WAR PROPHECY IS POINTED OUT BY ABERHART

Premier Says Biblical Prophecy Refers To Coming War

CALGARY, June 3—A "shadowy prophecy" suggesting Hitler would not invade the British Isles but would turn his attention to Germany and then "disappear suddenly" was referred to by Premier William Aberhart, when he spoke at the Calgary Prophetic Bible Institute yesterday.

The Premier asked his listeners to notice the prophecy of the last days of the world, regarding the nations at war at the present time. "In the prophecies regarding the last times, we see Russia, Germany, Scandinavia, Austria, Belgium and the Netherlands on the one side, while on the other side is Britain, France, Spain, the United States with Italy."

SHADOW OF FUTURE

"May I suggest this war is merely a shadow of the coming war. If Spain and the United States enter the war it will be on the side of the Allies. This also applies to Italy although that may hardly seem credible.

"The war described in Daniel, chapter 11, shows Britain suffering a setback that threatens her homeland but, strangely enough, the attacking general suddenly disappears.

"Daniel, chapter 11, verses 18 and 19, reads: After this shall he, the king of the north, turn his face unto the isles and shall take many; but a prince for his own behalf shall cause the reproach offered by him to cease. Then he shall face toward the fort of his own land. But he shall stumble and fall and not be found.

HITLER TO DISAPPEAR

"The shadowy fulfilment of this suggests to us that Hitler, the present leader against the Allies, shall turn his attention shortly towards his own land rather than the invasion of the isles.

"That is the shadow. Upon this action Hitler will disappear suddenly, no one will know where. "In reading the shadowy fulfilment of any prophecy one must be sure not to attempt interpretation too far ahead. We must remember the shadow is never clear in its outline," declared Mr. Aberhart.

SALE OF ARMY AIRPLANES TO ALLIES ASKED

Senator Pepper Seeking Immediate Delivery To Aid Allies

WASHINGTON, June 3.—President Roosevelt was reported reliably yesterday to have before him a proposal the administration authorise the army and navy to "trade in" some of their older warplanes to manufacturers who in turn could sell them to the Allies for immediate delivery.

This suggestion was said to have been made by Senator Claude Pepper, Florida Democrat, at a White House conference Saturday.

SOME DOUBTFUL

Some administration advisors are known to have expressed doubt about the wisdom of the proposal, however, contending that the United States could not afford to reduce its own air forces at this time.

Advised of the proposal, Senator Warren Austin, the assistant Republican leader, said reporters he would favor it if the trade-in could be worked out without weakening United States defence forces.

"We must have a lot of old planes that we can spare and that the Allies can use right away," he said. "I understand that they are begging for almost any kind of fighting plane they can get now."

As tentatively outlined, the plan provides that the army and navy could select some of their older warplanes and trade them in to manufacturers to apply on the cost of new models coming out in the next few months.

MEANS 500 PLANES

Title having passed to the manufacturers, it was said, the latter would be free to sell these planes to the Allies and could give immediate delivery. Production of new models has not yet been speeded up sufficiently to supply the Allies at this time with anything like the number of planes they want.

Advocates estimated that 500 planes still fit for fighting purposes, although not of the latest type, might thus be obtained by the Allies at once.

Newspaper Urges Immediate Help

PHILADELPHIA, June 3. — The Philadelphia Inquirer in a front-page editorial yesterday urged the United States make available "quickly" to Great Britain and France "without stint or hindrance, all the material resources we can spare."

"This means all the fighting aircraft of our army and navy that we don't absolutely need now," said the newspaper, formerly strictly isolationist in its editorial policy.

Although declaring that the country "is sternly set against sending an army into Europe's holocaust," The Inquirer urged that the United States rush "planes, tanks and more planes" to the Allies. "We shall be doing it for America, for the protection of our own people, for the defence of our own beloved land," it said.

10 Veterans Of Norse Campaign Back In Britain

LONDON, June 3.—Ten veterans of Britain's campaign in Norway returned Sunday with a vivid tale of escape not unlike stories of the Allied withdrawal from Flanders.

The party, which landed at a Scottish port, said they were separated from their main force in fighting at Otta, in the Gudbrandsdal south of Dombas. It took them three weeks of tramping through the mountains, in snow five feet deep and with only the scantiest food supplies, to reach the coast, where they obtained a row boat.

They were able to lay in some provisions, and spend the next 10 days in the boat until they reached an island where they got a motor-boat to take them to Scotland. The boat broke down and a trawler towed them into port.

The number of persons engaged in rose culture in England rose from 800 to more than 2,000 when that country placed a duty on imported roses.

Fleets Of Allies In Mediterranean Greatly Increased

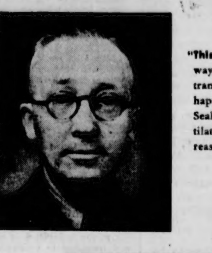

NEW YORK, June 3—The British Broadcasting Corporation, in a broadcast heard by the National Broadcasting Company in New York, said today Allied fleet units in the eastern Mediterranean "have been greatly increased during the last 14 days' despite the drive of the Germans to the English channel.

There is one dog to every four inhabited houses in England.

German Losses In Norway Are Larger Than First Thought

STOCKHOLM, June 3—The correspondent of the Swedish newspaper Aftonbladet, returned from a trip through German-occupied Norway, reported Sunday that the largest cemetery in Norway is German. Declaring the Germans had suffered larger losses than first reported, in their occupation of the country, he said the new cemetery outside Oslo covers about 237 acres.

THEY'VE DISCOVERED THAT NEW FORD RIDE

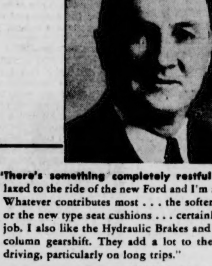

"This year I'm for the Ford because of the grand way my new car rides! I bought it for low-cost transportation, but I drive it more for fun! I'm happy with other features too, in particular, the Sealed-Beam headlamps and Controlled Ventilation. Costs little to run, also, which is another reason why I'm so enthusiastic."

J. HEINTZ, Lethbridge, Alta.

"Seems to me a lot of women will prefer the Ford car this year for its very comfortable ride. Ours lives up to all the salesman's promises . . . and better. I find it very easy to drive and park as well, and I'm entirely pleased with the low fuel consumption. All 'round, the new Ford was a good idea for this family."

Mrs. C. R. THOMPSON, Calgary, Alta.

"There's something completely restful and relaxed to the ride of the new Ford and I'm all for it! Whatever contributes most . . . the softer springs or the new type seat cushions . . . certainly does a job. I also like the Hydraulic Brakes and steering column gearshift. They add a lot to the ease of driving, particularly on long trips."

J. G. FLEMING, Edmonton, Alta.

"Take the word of a motorist with long experience . . . this new Ford of mine tops anything I've tried in low-price cars for the comfort of its ride! The stabilized chassis and those new heavy-duty shock absorbers do a real job. Take my word on performance, too . . . that V-8 engine has pick-up and power for any kind of difficult driving. The wonder is, it's so very economical!"

L. R. BLAIR, Medicine Hat, Alta.

HUNDREDS of wise motorists are learning all about the perfectly grand ride of the Ford V-8 for '40. Why don't you? It's very simple—just tell the Ford-Mercury-Zephyr dealer you want to drive a new Ford V-8 for 1940—the only V-type car, and the only "eight" in the low-price field! You'll like everything about it, including the price tag!

Contributions Gladly Received

Hon. J. L. Ralston says the Government will welcome donations of money to the war chest, or of tanks, planes or other type of equipment. That as a matter of course. The more money is sent in by generous donors, the less will have to be raised by taxation and the simpler will be the problem of financing the war effort. The same ultimate result will follow from gifts of any needed kind of war supplies. May the donors be many and the contributions large.

But let it not be forgotten that it is one thing to give one's own money, or a plane or tank bought with one's own money; and quite a different thing to go about asking other people for money for these purposes. In the former war this business of passing the hat got to be considerable of a nuisance and the cause of a good deal of not unreasonable resentment.

The point is just here, and it is worth taking note of. When the Government buys a gun with tax-money, the miser and the Nazi-sympathizer have to help pay for it. When a gun is bought by public subscription these parties contribute nothing and only the pockets of patriotic persons are hit. Willing as the latter are to give, there is no conceivable reason why the others should be excused.

To hand out a contribution to the war fund from one's own pocket helps the country one hundred per cent. To solicit voluntary contributions for equipment the Government would otherwise have to buy with tax-money simplifies public financing to the corresponding amount, but it helps the tight-wad and the enemy-sympathizer to escape a fair share of the war cost at the expense of other people.

On the Spring-Board

Il Duce has been going through all the preliminary motions of making a spectacular plunge into the war. His press has been screaming malediction at the Allies, his Fascisti youths clamoring to be sent out to tear them to pieces, at the instigation of his propaganda agents, while Benito has found excuses to reject every suggestion of a betterment of the relations between Italy and the democracies. If, after all this stage-setting, Il Duce does not take the plunge forthwith it will be the back-down of the ages.

Italy has a powerful air force and a powerful fleet and an army millions strong. It has been commonly assumed the fighting quality of the army is not in keeping with its numbers. But it will not do to count too much on that. Italian youth has been dosed with the same intoxicating dope as German youth and may have attained a similar degree of indoctrinated courage. The Allies have done well to keep a strong fleet and a strong army within striking distance of the areas where Italian forces might be expected to operate.

Fortunately, Italy's neighbors have been taking account of the Mussolini plans for expansion, and correctly interpret these as boding no good to themselves. Turkey has some old scores to settle in that quarter. So has Egypt. So has Greece. So have some at least of the Balkan states. And they all may see in Hitler's bloody march through western Europe what his Axis partner may be expected to attempt in the Mediterranean area.

If Il Duce "goes in," he will not go in alone; and the other entrants may add as much weight to the Allied striking power as he can add to that of the Fuehrer.

Making War on the Dead

According to reports which seem to be reliable, Nazi airmen deliberately bombed and destroyed the beautiful memorial to our war dead which the Canadian people reared on Vimy Ridge, and the adjacent cemeteries where British, French and Canadian soldiers in the former war sleep beneath the crosses "row on row."

Contemptible beyond words as this desecration is, it can excite no feeling of surprise. It is just what Nazi airmen would be expected to do—were in fact expected to do. There is no depth of infamy to which men will not descend whose hands are stained with the blood of women and children. Those who attach no sacredness to human life, and feel no moral responsibility in wantonly destroying it, cannot be supposed to know such thing as respect for the dead and memorials to the dead.

There was no military purpose in this sacrilege. Standing by itself it might be put down as a childish exhibition of spite on the part of demented individuals. But it is so wholly in keeping with Nazi methods that it takes rank as one more evidence of the fiendish spirit inherent in the doctrine. By this exhibit also the nations must judge what kind of a world they will have to live in if totalitarianism triumphs and democracy is destroyed.

Nazlism long ago demonstrated to the understanding of all who think that it intends to abolish all the recognized decencies of life. Religion, fidelity between man and wife, love of children for their parents, the keeping of pledges between persons and nations, tolerance toward persons of other races and faiths—all these things it has openly repudiated and defiled. Little remained to complete the record of shame but that it should make war upon the dead; and this it has now done.

The bombs which blew this monument to pieces and disturbed the graves of cemeteries must have blasted the last doubt from neutral minds as to what Hitlerism means and intends to impose upon the world. In Allied countries, particularly in Canada, there will be a quickened rush of men to the recruiting offices. In a thousand factories, in both Allied and neutral countries, men will work feverishly to turn out the weapons by which this monster can be destroyed. For unless it is destroyed civilization will perish from the earth.

Young Italians are clamoring to be sent to the shambles. Il Duce, "impassive before them," continues to enlarge his demands for concessions from the Allies. He may intend to send his young worshippers to be killed for Hitler's sake, but he is giving a first-class representation of a man who thought he could wheedle a fat price out of Hitler's enemies for not doing it.

At the annual meeting of the C.P.R. in Montreal, President Van Horne said the shareholders would be asked to approve a lease of the C. and E. railway for six years without rental, with an option to purchase. It is expected that about 100 miles of the line will be completed this year, that it will reach Edmonton next year, and will be extended south from Calgary.

The Passing Show

By J. S. COWPER

Hard words are being spoken of young King Leopold of Belgium for having surrendered himself and his army to the Germans without warning his British allies, who had come to his aid. It was a most un-kingly crawl for the head of a brave nation. To my mind, the attitude of Mussolini throughout the war has been much more contemptible. He hasn't suffered a cent's worth. Indeed, supplying munitions by back door to Germany and making boots and uniforms for the French army, his nation has made money from both sides. But, taking a frankly vulture-like attitude, he waits to make sure that one or the other combatant becomes a corpse before floating down to pick its eyes out.

THE VULTURE ON THE FENCE

Young Mr. Mussolini, delighted after the Ethiopian campaign at the sport of bombing helpless Ethiopians with never an airplane or an anti-aircraft gun to defend them, wrote a book in which he said war brought out all the noblest qualities of man. This war, thus far, has brought out all the most ignoble traits of the human beast, with its attacks on civilians, its raids on helpless neutrals, its Quislings and its "fifth column" Judases.

Men who work from base motives often over-reach themselves, though it does appear at times that the devil takes care of his own. The irony of the Leopold betrayal on the day following the Empire's day of intercession for victory is just another of Life's multitudinous ironies. But to return to Mussolini. If there's one book in the realm of Italian literature dealing with statecraft that Il Duce has certainly studied and acted upon, it is Machiavelli's "Il Principe"—The Prince, a fourteenth century courtier and philosopher who dedicated his opus to Lorenzo the Magnificent, assured his prince that the State is neither moral nor immoral, and that the prince is justified in resorting to deception and treachery to maintain his prestige. It is an early form of the doctrine that the end justifies the means.

ADVICE FROM MACHIAVELLI

However, Machiavelli goes on to utter this warning:

"A prince ought to take care never to make an alliance with one more powerful than himself for the purpose of attacking others . . . because if he conquers, you are at his discretion."

Isn't the Rome-Berlin axis sitting for its photograph in that sentence. From the bloody purge of Munich to get rid of unwanted colleagues, to his treatment of Thyssen and others who financed his way to power, Hitler has shown that he has a spark of gratitude. If Mussolini puts his nation into war and the conflict ends with an Allied victory or a stalemate, then Mussolini loses. Were Germany to win, he would be dependent on Hitler's non-existent sense of gratitude.

As they say of another bond of affection, "Love at first sight may be all right, but a second look doesn't hurt."

It isn't only stupid class-bound minds like that of Chamberlain that are blind to obvious events and deaf to warnings from those who see clearly. Even the intelligensia of science are only now waking up to realize how deeply had penetrated the Nazi preparation for total war. Professor Wilton Krogman, anthropologist at the University of Chicago, has been making a study of German scientific journals. He points out the coincidence that advance armies of German anthropologists, geologists and paleontologists conducted "scientific research" in most of the small nations before the Nazi armies struck. Under the guise of scientific research, these men obtained precise advance information of the terrain and raw materials in the country marked for invasion.

ADVANCE BODY OF "SCIENTISTS"

Low in one of his cartoons of a year or two ago showed four men in a boat. The two in the stern were actively trying to keep down, by bailing, the water that rushed in from a damaged transom. One in the bow remarks to the other, "How fortunate that our end of the boat is all right!"

The activity of German researchers in many parts of United States, is making some scions of democracy there, wonder if their end of the boat is as safe as they once thought.

On This Date

By FRED WILLIAMS

Forty years ago today (June 3, 1910), Hon. L. P. Brodeur was sworn as the first minister of naval service of Canada.

Today his son, Victor Brodeur, then a lad in knee breeches, is a captain of that same Royal Canadian Navy. Sneered at in its inception as a "tin pot navy" the Royal Canadian Navy proved its mettle in its infancy four years after its creation, in the first war with Germany.

Today the Royal Canadian Navy and its allied air force are not only defending the coasts of Canada on two oceans, but are co-operating to the full with the Royal Navy in convoys and other protection of merchant shipping. Of one now sneers at the Royal Canadian Navy. We are all proud of it; proud not only for the great defence and ocean patrol work it is doing, but proud also because this force, the creation of two Prime Ministers, Wilfrid Laurier and Louis Philippe Brodeur—has brought together in a bond of daily service and national unity lads and men from the prairies as well as from our seaports.

Just a little over a year ago King George, as our Sailor King, presented colors to the Royal Canadian Navy in an historic ceremony at Victoria, B.C. The men who took part in the event have since put in weary hours of vigil on the Pacific coast, the while their brothers in the east at Halifax and elsewhere on the Atlantic coast, have performed wonders of seamanship in storm and fog and bitter cold, hand in hand with their comrades of the Royal Navy, who are proud to count the Royal Canadian Navy as now a powerful factor in Empire defence and attack. When the story of this war comes to be written its pages must contain many records of epic deeds done by Canadian naval men, now shrouded in secrecy but some day to be made known to the credit of the Royal Canadian Navy.

Current Comment

The Same Old Lie

Nazi propaganda is often stupid because it follows familiar patterns. It assumes that the public has completely lost its memory of previous events.

Take the case today of the German warning that Britain is going to sink the steamer President Roosevelt, which is bringing refugees from Europe. Berlin has discovered an Allied "plot."

If anything untoward happens to this ship the world will know whom to blame. It's an old trick of the Germans to accuse another nations of evil intention, then to commit the crime itself. Hitler has done this so often that the lie is recognized instantly.—Vancouver Sun.

London Comment

The Times: "Our ancient liberties are placed in pawn for victory. . . . Temporary surrender is made with glad heart and confident spirit for it makes every man and woman a member of the national forces."

The Manchester Guardian: "We must surrender our liberties to the government of our choice in order that we may resume them. . . . The government could do one thing that would have great significance—it could announce its assumption of control of the Bank of England."

The Telegraph: "Here at last is a tangible manifestation of that dynamic leadership for which the country has been looking."

The Daily Mail: "It's the kind of tonic the nation expects from its rulers."

The Daily Herald: "We accept the new law. We salute the intelligence of the statesmen who have introduced it. It shows a realism, an energy and a boldness in our leaders without which we could not hope for victory."

The Daily Express said: "The emergency powers bill and the treachery bill mean this: Henceforth we are fighting with us against us. Hitler started this war eight years ago. We start it today. Mr. Churchill: All you ask of us we will give. Willingly. Eagerly. This is the morning the nation has been waiting for ever since you made your appeal four months ago."

Industry to be Mobilized

Word from Ottawa indicates that, after lengthy negotiations, Canadian industry is at last to get from Great Britain designs for instruments of war which have been developed by British research experts during recent years and which have, so far, been kept secret. This means that Canadian industry, which has been allowed to do comparatively little war work so far, will, within measurable time, go on a war basis.

This will help Canadian employment. But that is not the principal point. It will also help the Allies in the war. This is a mechanized war. It was proven to be so in Poland nine months ago. It was proven again in Norway and proven conclusively in the past two weeks in France and Belgium. The Germans began preparations for mechanized war years ago. The Allies were far behind when they began, and they are not yet in the full tide of the production of war material. That is the reason for the recent German successes.

It was demonstrated in the last war that Canadian machine shops, if they have the designs, are as capable as any in the world of turning out guns and munitions. They could build tanks and airplanes too if they had or could get the necessary machine tools. But for many of the operations necessary they have the tools already. Now, happily, there will be an opportunity to put these tools to work.—Vancouver Province.

One Hundred Per Cent. Effort

Hon. C. D. Howe, minister of munitions and supply, who has been energetically performing the hard duties of his office, is meeting with gratifying support from industry, both capital and labor, in every branch. This is testimony to the patriotism of the people, who have risen to every difference because of the needs of the hour. Plants making aircraft have speeded up the tempo of their performances, and factories and mills engaged in turning out munitions and other articles of war are working "round the clock" twenty-four hours of the day. Industry has risen to the occasion and the employees are cooperating to the limit. Holidays have been sacrificed and yesterday union men voluntarily worked for regular pay rates instead of the overtime holiday rates they were entitled to under the provincial law. An extraordinary incident, and a magnificent patriotic gesture, was the action of employees in the pattern-shop of the Dominion Engineering Works at Lachine, who worked on Victoria Day for nothing, requesting that their earnings be turned over in a lump sum to the Canadian Red Cross. With such a spirit prevailing in industry there can be no doubt of the successful fulfilment of all contracts. There is unity without friction, which is of tremendous importance at this momentous period in the country's history.—Montreal Gazette.

FRUITS OF OLIVET

Quietly living, day by day, in sight of the Mount of Olives, I find it inciting diverse fruits. Its summit, the great gray hill, with its few clusters of trees, is stirring my imagination to meditation upon the fruits it has borne throughout the ages.

Strangely, there arise before my memory two faces, made radiant by the Man of Sorrows, who once wept upon the hillside that is before my eyes as I write. One was a Presbyterian elder in York, Pa., redeemed from a life of wickedness; the other was a woman seen in a Seattle rescue mission. Both wore "the light that was never on land or sea." The very texture of their countenances had become irradiated with spirituality. They bore the signature of Jesus, for all men to read.

It would take a book to follow out fully this thought of the fruits of Olivet. Probably the reader is bearing them.

By all the anguish Thou didst suffer on Olivet, O Christ, we would be constrained to holiness. Amen.

McCoy Health Service

If you have no backache you are indeed lucky, but if you are troubled by backache at the present time you will want to know what is causing your trouble.

It is very difficult to supply a quick answer to that question, inasmuch as there are several common causes of backache.

In addition to all the aches and pains which may arise when there is something wrong with the back itself, this part may also be affected by reflex aches which are the result of a disturbance of one of the internal organs. For example, bladder inflammation may cause more trouble in the back than in the bladder. Or, in women, a misplacement of the uterus or a prolapsed colon may induce backache. One of the possible causes of backache in men of middle age is a prostate disorder.

Spinal lesions are another possible cause of backache. In many cases these lesions have resulted from accident or from relaxation of the muscles attached to the spine. Spinal lesions refer to partially dislocated vertebrae which have been pushed out of place during an injury or have slipped out of place because of muscular weakness.

Pain in the back is sometimes the result of a definite strain, the patient remembering that the pain came on after a fall or after wrenching or twisting the back while lifting. The healthy person recovers rapidly from an injury of this type, but the person having a tendency to rheumatism may find that the discomfort continues.

In some instances trouble around the sacro-iliac joint on one side may mark the start of backache.

Backache may be the result of an abnormality in the feet or foot, as foot troubles may throw the spine out of alignment and by thus interfering with the proper balance of the body, may induce back strain. Feminine readers who have experienced a backache after changing to heels of a different height will understand how a change in the position of the feet may affect the back.

Aches in the upper part of the back may be due to occupational strains produced by holding a single position for some length of time. Backache may also result from poor posture, and from weakness of the back muscles.

The best plan, when persistent backache manifests itself, is to report for examination. During examination, the cause of the ache may be isolated, and with this information it then becomes possible to undertake suitable treatment.

As a means of relieving the discomfort of backache temporarily, such measures as rest, the use of heat, and perhaps massage, may be tried. Manipulative treatment will usually bring relief when the cause lies in a spinal lesion.

McKenney On Bridge

By WM. E. McKENNEY, America's Card Authority

As executive secretary of the American Contract Bridge League, I am required to cover the country pretty well each year, but it is a pleasant task. In each city I meet old friends, and past and future tournaments are always the subject of conversation. Naturally, a favorite bridge hand always comes to light.

My last trip was made entirely by plane, in order to cover a lot of territory in a short time. The first stop was Cleveland, where I talked with that popular favorite Henry B. Jaeger. Henry's favorite subject is squeeze plays, and the outstanding squeeze hand shown me was discussed.

As Jaeger explained, the problem was to transfer the squeeze from East to West. The second spade was trumped and a small heart led. East won with the queen and led a trump. Declarer won, ruffed a heart, came back to his hand with a diamond, and now laid down the king of hearts. East covered with the ace and the trick was ruffed in dummy with the ace of clubs.

"My son," said the retired merchant, "when I was your age, instead of idling away my time and smoking cigarettes, I was laboring ten hours a day building railroads."

"I'm proud of you, dad," retorted the modern youth. "Had it not been for your pluck and perseverance, I might be forced to do the same sort of work today."

"What do you mean, your job is a quiet one?"

"I'm a bookkeeper for a bookseller."

Two lawyers before a country justice recently got into a wrangle. At last one of the disputants, losing control of his temper, exclaimed to his opponent: "Jim Rogers, you are the biggest jackass I ever set eyes upon!"

The justice pounded the desk and called loudly for Order! Order! You ought to forget that I am in the room."

"Do you remember the time when your father drove a donkey cart?"

The candidate for election fixed his glasses and gazed thoughtfully at the interrupter. Then he replied: "As a matter of fact, I had forgotten the cart. But I am thankful to see the donkey is still alive."

She: "Yes, I never 'ad such cheek from a bus-conductor in my life. I see to 'im, I sez. 'If I wasn't a born lady, with relations in the aristocracy, I'd twist yer bloomin' neck in three places,' I sez."

"Phoebe, has your master returned?"

"No, mum; that was only the dog you heard growling just now."

It was the fifth time that the boy had been before the Bench on a charge of poaching.

"Do you realize," said the magistrate to the boy's father, "that this boy of yours is always appearing before me? Why don't you show him the right way?"

"I've shown him the right way," complained the father. "But the young fool still gets caught."

A Scotsman who wanted to learn what profession he would have his son enter put him into a room with a theological work, an apple and a sixpenny piece. If he found him when he returned reading the book, he intended to make a clergyman of him. If eating the apple, a farmer, and if interested in the money, a banker. When he did return he found the boy sitting on the book, with the sixpence in his pocket, eating the apple. "That settles it," said the keen Scotsman, "the lad's a born lawyer."

On The Record

By DOROTHY THOMPSON

An Open Letter To Benito Mussolini

DUCE: Before you take your nation into this war, think well and long concerning the United States of America.

We are an odd people, Duce. Our democracy may seem to you sprawling and unwieldy, compact, composed of all the peoples of Europe, divided in its opinions, quarreling among ourselves as often over trivial as over important matters.

D. Thompson

But that is only one America. The other is the American that flies together in an emergency; that, being slow to anger, is terrible in wrath; that, detesting imposed discipline, can impose it upon itself; that, being individual, can be, briefly or for long, united in gorgeous self-discipline.

We are a nation of sportsmen. On Saturday afternoons 40 or 50 million Americans go to ball games. We love a fair game. We are a peace-loving nation, Duce, but we have fought plenty of wars.

Although we detest aggression particularly the aggression of the strong against the weak—we despise the spirit of who strikes down the wounded, who waits until his prey is locked in a life and death struggle and then falls upon him from behind.

We are an idealistic nation, Duce. In us is still a crusading and evangelic spirit. Not dead in us, Duce, is a sense of historic mission, a chivalric impulse, a sympathy for the underdog—a sympathy which our strength allows us to indulge.

For we are very strong, Duce. We are stronger than you know; stronger, even, than we know. From Italy, Germany looks mighty to you. You see her great industries, her imposing furnaces, mills, factories, storehouses, turning out and hoarding for these many years airplanes and tanks, and explosives, and great guns.

These do not impress us, Duce. The potential industrial power, the backbone of modern warfare, is not in Germany. It is in the United States. That potential of power is five times that of all Europe combined. We have at this moment the capacity to produce 8,000,000 automobiles, in factories running only on day shifts; our tractor production runs into millions; and motorized equipment and tanks are only automobiles and trucks with tin hats on. We can produce more steel than all of Europe combined; we are a land built of skyscrapers and steel construction; our workers know how to handle steel, and their numbers are legion.

We have no desire to turn the instruments of peace into death-dealing instruments, but if we choose to do so, be aware! Fifty thousand planes a year are not enough we can double the number. We could scatter the seas with torpedo and mosquito boats. Our resources will not run out. They are within our borders. They are in our own hands.

Do not be deceived, Duce, by what is termed "public opinion." There is a genuine public opinion, and moves with and responds to events. Did you observe that defense vote in the Senate, Duce? Can you recall another time when the Senate of the United States has passed a unanimous vote—78 to 0?

Duce, you have spoken on Roman pride. It is no mean or empty word. Yours are a great people, skilful, lucid, intelligent and brave. Brave, Duce, in a cause in which they believe. The world has said of them that they desert alliances, and that, no doubt, has rankled in your mind. The world also has said that they wait to choose the winning side.

Proudest is the nation that chooses what is right, in harmony with its own instincts. Your people, Duce, do not want this war. Let a stranger who has been briefly in your country tell you what you yourself must know. They do not believe in this war. They believe in neither side, though their spontaneous sympathy goes out to France. But not to Germany, Duce, no more than to England.

Their instinct tells them that Italy will not win this war for Italy, if she goes into it. But she may lose it for Europe—for the Europe which Italy cradled and of which she is an indissoluble part.

Your people have good instincts, Duce. A fortnight ago, in Italy, when the government it seemed as though a detente had occurred and Italy would stand aloof, your people were wreathed in smiles and expressed their joy even to the casual traveling stranger. A leader is great in so far as he expresses and incorporates the instincts of his people. When he runs athwart them his star is lost.

You said some days ago, "Italy cannot stand permanently aloof from the vicissitudes of Europe."

Duce, the vicissitudes of Europe are the vicissitudes of the world. Do you think that the United States of America can stand aloof from the vicissitudes of the world? This continent, lying between two oceans; these forty-eight entities looking westward, looking eastward, vast and free? Do you think that the United States will live in this world on the terms of any power or combination of powers?

Contempt, Duce, is more poisonous than anger. It amites casually and surely. And nations recognize it and feel it themselves. Their instruments of power they know self-contempt. There is such a thing as national remorse. No one lives great in history who creates in his people a feeling of remorse instead of pride. You have read history, Duce, and you know that this is true.

Duce, your industrialists do not want this war. Your peasants do not want this war. The women of Italy do not want this war. Only a part of your youth wants it, now, before it has begun, when you can sway them with your magnetism. But if this war becomes worldwide and is long, there will be consequences for your youth and for your nation which you, too, in the watches of the night, must have thought of and turned, troubled, on your pillow.

Remember that when you make your decision you will also be helping to make ours.

Duce!

POPE PLEADS FOR HUMANITY IN WARFARE

Urges Fighting Nations Keep War As Humane As Possible

VATICAN CITY, June 3—Pope Pius Sunday beseeched the fighting nations of the world to keep their war as humane as possible.

"We beseech the belligerents to remember always the duties of humanity which do not lose their value even under the law of morality of war," he declared.

The Pontiff, replying to the greetings of the cardinals on the occasion of his name day, expressed dismay over the widening area of the conflict. He told them:

"I do not think we can be permitted on this occasion to renounce the expression of our sorrow at, the treatment which we see inflicted on non-combatants in more than one zone, treatment which is far from conforming with humanitarian rules.

"God is our witness that in affirming this necessary truth we are not moved by partisan spirit and that we allude to no person in particular."

The pope said populations in occupied areas should be treated as in a similar case, an invader would like to see his own citizens treated.

The pope listed as follows the rules for treatment of civilians by the conqueror:

"Respect for the existence of honor and property of citizens;

"Respect for the family and its rights;

"Liberty of observance in private and public of the Catholic and of spiritual assistance in a manner conforming to the respective populations and their languages;

"Liberty of instruction and religious education;

"Security of ecclesiastical property;

"Liberty for priests to have contact with their clergy and with their faithful in all that concerns the care of souls."

FAUST

STORY UNITES COUSINS AFTER 48 YEARS TIME

Two cousins, one of Faust and the other of Red Deer, who had not seen each other for nearly 50 years, discovered each other through a story in The Edmonton Bulletin with a picture of Ben Barnheart of Faust standing on his hands at the age of 70 years.

The story mentioned that Mr. and Mrs. Barnheart were married 48 years ago and Mrs. F. Kee of Red Deer recalled that her cousin Emma Schachorn had married a man named Barnheart about 48 years ago.

She wrote immediately and discovered that Mrs. Barnheart was her cousin. Mrs. Kee formerly was a Miss Lobb.

JASPER

First Tour Party Arrives At Jasper; Thrilled By Snow

G. L. Campbell, of Eau Claire, Wisconsin, professor of photography at Wisconsin State Teachers College, headed a party of 20 students that inspected Jasper Park over Sunday. They visited Mt. Edith Cavell and enjoyed the unique thrill of snow in June on the glacier. Before entraining for Prince Rupert and later Alaska, they will inspect the Maligne canyon on Monday morning. This is the first tour party to register in Jasper Park this season.

FAIRVIEW

Miss Joan Standfast arrived in Fairview direct from England. She is connected with the Anglican "Sunday School by Post," for children in the sparsely settled outlying districts of Alberta and British Columbia. This covers much territory: west to Rolla, B.C., east to Waterways, Alta., from Boyle (near Athabasca), north.

At Fairview is the headquarters of the work in this diocese of Athabasca. St. Nicholas house was built here by Miss Eva Hasele, M.D.E., in 1932. There, three workers, trained at Edmonton, are employed and each month over 4,000 papers to nearly 2,700 families. The ladies stationed in Fairview are Misses W. Seaman, E. Eastwood and M. Duncan-Jones.

ELK POINT

The biggest building boom Elk Point has experienced in several years is underway at the present time. New homes under construction are Bruce MacDonald's, Carl Nielsen's, O. Traver's and W. E. Caskey's. These are all nearing completion, and a two-storey business building is being started for Dan Windiuk.

The monthly meeting of the Women's Institute was held at the home of Mrs. Quin when plans were completed for the district conference being held at St. Paul on June 18.

OYEN

Seeding is nearly finished at Oyen. The steady rains and showers have left the gardens along, giving splendid growth.

The Oyen Red Cross held a card party Tuesday evening. $107.820 was cleared to buy treats for the soldiers.

MORRIN

B. Ireland left this week to join the Calgary Highlanders. His position with the Bank of Montreal has been filled by Mr. McIvor, of Camrose. Seeding operations have been completed in this district and vegetation is showing above the ground.

NINTH DUKE OF NORTHUMBERLAND KILLED AT FRONT

LONDON, June 3—The Duke of Northumberland has been killed in action, it was announced last night. He was 27 and succeeded his father to the ancient dukedom in 1930.

The ninth Duke, born Henry George Alan Percy, headed the Percy family that has been renowned in English history for centuries. He was a lieutenant in the Grenadier Guards and was parliamentary private secretary to the air ministry in 1938.

The dukedom, created in 1766, now falls to the late Duke's brother, Lord Hugh Algernon Percy, 26.

Other titles which accompany the dukedom are: Earl of Northumberland, Baron Warkworth, Earl Percy, Earl of Beverley, Lord Lovaine, Baron of Alnwick.

The Duke, known a year ago as the largest single owner of coal properties in England, created a stir when he temporarily quit his 300-room Alnwick castle for 20-room Leabury house, nearby, because of heavy taxes and declining royalties.

CYCLONE HITS 19TH HOLE AT "DRUM" LINKS

Exclusive to Edmonton Bulletin

DRUMHELLER, June 3. — A cyclonic wind struck the golf clubhouse at the "nineteenth" hole of the Drumheller Golf and Country club, here, early today, leaving ruin in its wake. Damage included two wrecked cars and a wrecked clubhouse and furniture, the latter being scattered over an area of about 200 yards.

A car owned by Jack Anschitz was carried off by the force of the wind and then rolled over —with Anschitz inside. The clubhouse, reduced to matchwood, crashed down on the car and caused extensive damage to the machine. Anschitz suffered cuts and bruises about the face.

Russell Blake and Gus Yavia were occupants of another car which was also partially wrecked by the blast.

Northern France Looks Like Flaming Torch to Writer During Air Trip

BY TAYLOR HENRY
Associated Press Staff Writer

WITH THE FRENCH BOMBER COMMAND ON THE NORTHERN FRONT, June 3.—Seen from the air from a French plane at night, the entire northern front of France looks like a flaming torch.

I have just made a long night reconnaissance flight over the northern battlefields.

It was just at nightfall that the night bombing squadron, of which I was a guest, received its orders.

"Attack in force against Cambrai airport and the crossroads south of Arbecville where considerable German troops concentrations have been observed."

NAZIS BOMBED BEFORE

When I read the orders I caught my breath. Only two weeks ago, as I had left Cambrai, squadrons of German planes were bombing that same airport on the outskirts of that town, which was then being evacuated by the French.

The commander of the squadron let me flying gear.

When we reached the almost completely deserted airport, the plane already was ready. After a quick handshake around, the five of us took our places.

A thin line of red lights flickered on the field to mark our runway. The first pilot—I was listed as a supernumerary second pilot—gave the huge plan the gun and we lifted gracefully into the air, circled the field and headed toward the battle zone.

Some 10 minutes before we front was reached, it was outlined by flashes of artillery fire.

The plane rose to escape fire of anti-aircraft guns. The French pilots have nicknamed the German, 20 millimeter anti-aircraft guns "poum-poums," and that is exactly the sound they make as the shells explode.

It is not exactly a comfortable feeling to be sitting in a plane while the "poum-poums" burst around.

The explode on almost every side at almost the same moment that you see the flashes on the ground.

It takes a lot more hit in a vital spot to disable one of these giant planes. Even a hit on the wings makes only a hole a foot square.

From the air at night the battle line running from Montmedy, where it leaves the Maginot line, through Sitenay, Aulgny, Rethel, Neufchateau, Aniay, La Fere, Chauny, Ham and Amiens to Abbeville on the English Channel, shows a scarcely-defined line.

FRENCH DRIVE SALIENT

If it were not for the Aisne and the Somme rivers, which the line follows, it would be difficult to recognize.

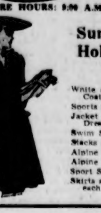

Apparently heavy fighting was going on in the Amiens-Albert region where the French seem to have driven a salient. There the flash of artillery was heavier than in any other part of the line and there we saw minute flames which the observation officer said were from machine-gun fire.

Our plane was scouting to learn the effect of the bombing of the other planes.

Each squadron already had bombed the Cambrai airport when we arrived over it. The southeast corner of the airport was in flames, indicating a direct hit had been made either on gasoline tanks or stocks of incendiary bombs.

Shoe manufacturing was introduced into America in 1629 by Thomas Beacy, who brought hides over on the Mayflower.

DOROTHY DIX Says:

This is the time of year when thousands of girls who have just graduated from school look with bewildered eyes upon a world whose reality they are sensing for the first time, and themselves ask: "What do we go from here?" All their lives they have been replemented. Mothers and teachers have mapped out their activities and told them what to do next. I would like to make a suggestion to these little maidens who do not know what to do with themselves. It is this:

Spend this interlude between the school room and the day when you espouse either a career or a man—or both—in learning how to cook and sew.

No matter what else a woman knows, she always needs to know how to prepare a tasty meal and run up a seam. The pot and the needle are her weapons of offense and defense, and if she has skill with them she can work magic and she is never beaten or helpless.

If you want to catch a husband and hold him, your best bet is in knowing how to cook. Beauty palls on a man so that he ceases to notice even a living picture; wit and wisdom and wisecracks fail upon deaf ears in time. But a man's appetite never fails.

Also, in the Cook Book, not in moral maxims or romantic novels, will you find the real recipe for turning a rounder into a fireside companion.

If you are a Heaven-born genius, follow your star, following reflect upon the fact that the two eternal needs of humanity are food and clothes, and that those who can supply these can always make a living.

If she can make a dress that isn't a rubber stamp of every other woman's dress, she can commit highway robbery and get away with it.

If a girl is poor and marries a poor boy, as most girls do, their subsequent fate and whether at middle age they are an Easy Street or still squatting in Poverty Row depends largely on whether the girl can take a bit of tough meat and a handful of vegetables and turn it into a ragout that will make your mouth water.

If, unfortunately, she should be left a widow with a houseful of children, if she is a good cook she need not fear the Poorhouse for her brood. For she can start a boarding house.

So you see, girls, there is no better business that you can go into than that of homemaking for yourself, or for others.

It will give you a money-making occupation if you don't marry. And if you do marry, oh, boy, how your husband will bless you!

DOROTHY DIX.

Allies Expect Weygand To Turn Tide Of Battle Against German Hordes

BY SIR PHILIP GIBBS
British War Correspondent

PARIS, June 3.—(By Wireless)—The British Expeditionary Forces in Flanders, making a last stand with their backs to the sea and the enemy pressing hard upon them from three sides, have won imperishable glory. Among them were the Guards—the Grenadier, Coldstream and Welsh Guards—Highlanders, Irish Fusiliers and men of all the English country regiments. With them also were the Cavalry, who left their horses for light tanks and made the first reconnaissance in Belgium, and the black beret men of the Royal Tank Regiment with medium tanks that are no match in weight for the German monsters.

Artillery, anti-aircraft batteries, ambulances, mechanical excavators, and a mass of men and material, which a modern army needs for its life and equipment, were caught in this dreadful man trap which closed in upon them with storms of steel, after the Belgian army laid down its arms by the order of a craven, who betrayed his allies.

SIR PHILIP GIBBS

IN DIRECT PERIL

That British army in Flanders, from whom I have been cut off on the south side of the Somme after being with them since the beginning of the war and through the long, grim winter, has been in the direst peril as all the world knows. Their perils have been heavy and tragic, but those remaining fought their way through to safety in perfect order and discipline.

They have been fighting back for twenty days from the east of Brussels by way of Louvain to Cambrai and Bapaume and across the fields of Flanders, haunted forever by the thoughts of the last war—their own fathers and elder brothers—to Ypres and Menin and Cassel on the hill top. They were pursued all the way by German bombers, those black bats of death who seem immeasurable although caught and killed in great numbers by our young pilots.

They were without rest or respite for those twenty days and nights. The cemeteries where our dead of the last war lay in peace with their white crosses have been ploughed up and ravaged by shell fire and bombs.

The war memorials have crashed. The cities newly-built after the last war—Cambrai, Arras, Amiens and many more—are in ruins again. Lagnone and Calais are greatly damaged by frightful bombing. Many French villages, untouched by the last war and lovely in their peaceful countryside in this month of beauty, have been visited by German bombers and their terror from the sky.

In one of them yesterday I heard from a young girl how she and her fellow refugees had been raked by machine-gun fire from low-flying planes as their farm carts crawled down the roads on their way of escape. There is no doubt about these things, too horrible to believe, I have the evidence of them from simple and honest folk.

It is necessary now to give this black side of war's infernal picture. Too little has been said about it. There are people still who do not realize the inferno which has swept Europe.

There is a brighter side, too. It is the spirit of faith and even of confidence which burns in the minds of every man and woman to whom I speak in France. They are disappointed that it was impossible to strike northward from the Somme and the Aisne in time to cut through the German columns on their way to the coast and link up with the allied troops between Peronne and Cambrai, but the day of reckoning is coming.

COUNTER BLOWS

The man in the street and the man in the cafe here in France are certain that General Maxime Weygand will in good time, strike the great counter-blow. "He will not attack in small pockets," they say. "That mistake cost us dearly in the last war."

They are patient in the belief that General Weygand will choose the right moment to turn the tide. May that faith be justified before many days have passed. Certain it is that the Germans have had enormous losses; they are not so strong as they were twenty days ago although still with immense reserves behind them.

France also has immense reserves, and when the counter-blow is struck it will be devastating(ly) effective, of that we are certain, and now that the epic evacuation of the B.E.F. and their heroic allies from Flanders is almost completed with unprecedented success, the unbeatn allied forces await only the order which will once more bring them to grips with the invader.

When that order comes Germany will learn, and pay for the lesson, that the indomitable spirit of freedom and liberty still lives and is still a great fighting force, inconquerable in its fierce determination to prove that right must and will prevail over night.

Calgary Youth Seriously Hurt In Car Accident

CALGARY, June 3—Critically injured in a Banff trail car crash last December 10, which left him unconscious for five days, Irvine Gahn, 17, Calgary, was seriously hurt again last night when a car in which he was riding turned on its side in the ditch along the Bragg Creek trail, 25 miles southwest of Calgary.

Gahn is in the Holy Cross hospital, unconscious, suffering from severe head injuries. Dr. H. V. Morgan, attending, said there were no external evidences of a fractured skull, but he was in a serious condition.

WITH the Germans in control of air bases in the Low Countries, Britain fears that she's next on the Nazis' blitzkrieg program. This map shows how the invaders are likely to strike and where.

England's large number of airports (150 of all kinds south of Leeds) make her susceptible to assault by parachute troops. In greatest danger are her industrial midlands, the heart of her munitions industry.

The parachute technique is simple and deadly—as the Nazis' five-day conquest of Holland proved. Reconnaissance planes spot an undefended or lightly defended field (and it's a tough job defending 150 airports). Then come the parachutists. They try to establish a primary defence ring around the airport.

After they set up machine gun nests, the transports come, landing troops, munitions, heavier weapons. They extend the defence ring. Successive waves of air transports arrive, and the field becomes a base of operations in the heart of enemy country.

The home defence must then become the attackers to dislodge the invaders. Attack against such defence rings is a costly tactic.

Britain's east coast dock facilities are in serious jeopardy. (Dock facilities are of primary importance to a nation 85 per cent dependent on shipborne supplies.)

Airplanes flying at 20,000 feet need not even cross the coast line to bomb these docks. They can release their bombs three miles out and momentum will carry them to the objective. They do not need to even aim at an individual target, as in "spot" bombing. They can do area bombing and still smash the dock areas.

Group-Captain L. L. Maclean of the R.A.F. lately explained the area technique and its danger to the east coast harbors at Hull and London's port at the Thames' mouth.

Three bombers, each carrying eight 250-pound bombs, fly abreast. They release their bombs by automatic devices at one-second intervals. Such bombing will demolish an area 1,100 yards long, 450 wide, a total of 102 acres. Maclean calculated a wave of 120 bombers could ruin the London dockage, that 300 bombers could smash the Hull oil and dock areas.

England's excellent road network increases her vulnerability. 'Chute troops, with motorcycles, would be a hornet's nest once established on any of the 150 airports. Radiating roads would carry them quickly to key industrial objectives.

Britain has geared her defence to stop the Nazi bomber waves before they cross the coast. Recent dispatches tell that a heavy patrol of interceptor fighters is constantly in the air over the channel. Patrol boats augment the watch, reporting to a central headquarters, which dispatches interceptors.

A barge-anchored balloon barrage guards key points off the coast. An "inner ring" of anti-aircraft outside the industrial areas is additional insurance. Home guard "parashooter" corps have been armed to pick off descending air blitzkriegers. Mobile anti-aircraft is constantly at alert to meet threatened danger over rail and highway systems.

The war's outcome in no small measure depends on whether all these defences are adequate.

FARM RELIEF, UNEMPLOYMENT BILLS PENDING

OTTAWA, June 3.—Unemployment and farm relief, chronic and troublesome problems at every session of parliament in the last 10 years, return to the fore in the House of Commons this week.

Hon. Norman McLarty, minister of Labor, will seek approval of the annual bill authorizing the government to make grants to provinces for relief of distress arising from unemployment and crop failure.

While relief is not expected to call for such large sums of money with war industries expanding their operations, the bill is certain to bring about a general review of the unemployment problem.

When the house meets today the prime minister likely will make a statement on war developments.

News of the desecration of the Canadian Memorial at Vimy Ridge by the Germans was received in Ottawa with horror and anger. It was thought Mr. King may have some information on it for the House.

FRANCE HONORS TWO HEROES OF FLANDERS FIGHT

PARIS, June 3—General Georges Blanchard and General Rene Jacques Prioux, France's two heroes of the battle of Flanders, have been raised to higher rank in the Legion of Honor on recommendation of Generalissimo Maxime Weygand.

A communique from Premier Reynaud's office said that General Blanchard, commander of the Allied armies in northern France, had been raised to the highest rank, the Grand Cross, in the Legion of Honor.

General Prioux, commander of the first French army which still is covering the Allies' northern flank near Dunkerque, was made a grand officer of the legion.

General Prioux's whereabouts have not be reported for days. The Germans have claimed him and his staff as prisoners of war.

A third French hero of the Channel battle, Rear Admiral Jean Abrial, who commanded the French fleet helping in the Dunkerque evacuation, was rewarded last Friday with promotion to the Grand Cross.

'Nice' Nazis Courting Norway: Aim At Lasting Marriage With Nation

BY WILLIS THORNTON
Bulletin Special Correspondent

The diabolically-clever methods by which the Germans are trying to win over the peoples they have conquered are revealed by Berge M. Heede, Norwegian-born naturalized American citizen, who was living in Oslo when the Germans came. Heede has just returned to the U.S.

The Germans are obviously setting down for a long occupation," says Heede, who left Oslo April 29. "Their soldiers are scrupulously polite. Their discipline is marvelous. Every effort is made to avoid offending the Norwegians. Nothing is stolen. Business is encouraged to continue, though of course the Germans spend only a special kind of "funny money," printed up in advance and good only in Germany.

TROOPS TOLD TO BE NICE

Every German soldier was provided in advance with a sheet of instructions on how to conduct himself in Norway," says Heede. "This analyzed very cleverly the Norwegian character and the attitude best calculated to appeal to it. The discipline was such that the German soldiers held closely to these instructions. I know of no cases of looting or of wanton destruction by individual soldiers.

The instructions, found on German dead, ran along these lines:

You are not landing in an enemy country. You arrive to protect the country and its people, who have strong Aryan blood of national pride. Therefore: do nothing to offend the national honor.

The Norwegians love freedom and are unwilling to submit to arbitrary authority. They don't like militarism. Therefore: be few orders. Peremptory orders would antagonize the people. Tell them in a logical way what is to be done, and this will win their co-operation.

The Norwegian's home is holy to him, but he is very hospitable. People leave their houses unlocked and stealing is considered a great disgrace. Therefore: never go where you are not asked: respect property.

The Norwegians have no understanding of war, and almost all of them dislike Nazism. Therefore: do not talk politics.

"The Germans are polite and ingratiating," says Heede. "The release of war prisoners was another effort of Hitler to swing the Norwegians over to his side. Since the basing of the German fleet in Oslo, the best harbor in that part of Europe, it is clear that the Germans hope to establish a permanent relationship there.

MANY NORWEGIANS WITHOUT SUPPORT

"Despite influx of the German "funny money" between half a million and a million Norwegians are without their ordinary means of support. Thousands fled to the hills to escape the bombers, taking nothing with them. When they returned, say to Elverum or Stavanger, they found their homes leveled to the earth, their business gone. Thousands fled to Sweden, where they are helpless. Most of the refugees are old persons, unable to get money from home, and dependent on the bounty of already impoverished Norwegian friends.

Heede, an importer, is advising the Norwegian Relief Fund in its drive for urgently-needed money, food and clothing for almost a third of Norway's people deprived of their things by the German invaders.

Berge Heede . . . saw Oslo fall to slick Nazis.

British Warships Bombard Germans In Norway Fjord

MO, Norway, June 3—British warships Sunday entered Ranafjord and violently bombarded German ports and positions along the railway is about 175 miles south of Narvik, one port recently captured by the Allies.

Violent fighting continued during the day. Gunfire could be heard as far as the Swedish border.

The Germans in this region are now cut off from all communications with Sweden. Recent bombardments have damaged all rail lines.

MAN REFUSES TAKE INTEREST ON WAR BONDS

OTTAWA, June 3.—"I do not like the idea of profiting from the war," writes a free-will contributor to the minister of finance. The contributor, who wishes to remain anonymous, bought war bonds on February 1. Voluntarily surrendering interest on all but two $50 bonds, he below writes: "I did not feel very patriotic taking the money out of the bank at 1½ per cent and investing at 3½ per cent. I think there is a movement on foot to take less interest, so would like to be able to draw interest on only 2 of the bonds (I forgot to mention they are of $50 denomination). I think there are many thousands of small depositors who would be only too willing to take less interest or 0 interest at all. Please do not mention my name. It is rather uncommon; I am not asking publicity, and should very much object to it. I do not like the idea of profiting from the war; I am too old to do anything myself."

Dr. S. W. Arthur of Redvers, Saskatchewan, has endorsed over to the Treasury Dept. for war purposes, a cheque for $70 received from the provincial government for professional services in connection with relief.

700 EGYPTIAN FIFTH COLUMN SUSPECTS HELD

ALEXANDRIA, June 3 — Seven hundred "fifth column" suspects seized in a week-end round-up were sent today to internment camps in Upper and Lower Egypt.

Approximately 600 of the suspects were seized in Cairo and the remainder in Alexandria. All were held under strong guard to await trial before military tribunals.

Precautions are being taken meanwhile, said the government is studying new measures to assure the nation's internal security in view of the tense situation in the Mediterranean.

Fully equipped soldiers with fixed bayonets stood guard over telegraph and telephone systems. Heavy guards also were placed at railway stations, bridges and strategic points along highways and canals. Police armed with rifles patrolled the streets.

LONDON, June 3—Sapper A. Rutherford was one of the British soldiers who got safely out of Flanders through the rain of bombs and machine-gun bullets. Friday night he was struck by an automobile while crossing a blacked-out street. He died Saturday.

Sixty-seven inches of rain fell at Assam, India, in a single year.

Italy War Entry Will Not Affect Spain's Position

MADRID, June 3—The Spanish government Sunday took firm action against youthful demonstrators clamoring for "return" of Gibraltar to Spain and formally repudiated reports that Italy's entry into the war on Germany's side also will mean Spain's participation against the Allies.

Italy's entry will in no way change Spain's position of non-belligerency, an authoritative spokesman said.

Britain Turns Attention To Enemy's Next Move, Possible Action By Italy

GOVERNMENT SEEKS AVOID PAY DISPUTES

War Industry Is Asked To Refer Labor Problems To Government

OTTAWA, June 3.—The government has requested war industry to refer any labor disputes over rates of overtime and holiday pay to the labor department immediately in order to prevent any interruption in the industrial speed up. It was learned last night.

A telegram was sent during the week-end by Hon. C. D. Howe, munitions minister, and Hon. Norman McLarty, minister of labor, to principal firms engaged in war work, pointing out no misunderstanding regarding such rates of pay must exist and in the national interest disputes should be considered by the labor department at once.

While the department is investigating any dispute, work on war contracts must continue, the telegram stated.

Mr. Howe said Saturday that Canadian clothing workers "are extending themselves to the full to aid the country in the present crisis."

The supply minister announced receipt of a wire from the president of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America, S. Spivak, stating members of the organization would work 10 hours extra each week at regular rates of pay, making military garments.

The government desires that overtime and holiday work be paid for under whatever agreements were in effect in the plants before May 22 respecting such payments.

Pilot Killed

COMMANDER DOUGLAS KING, one of the co-pilots who flew Britain's then Prime Minister Chamberlain to Munich for the famed "appeasement" pact, has been killed in action, according to notification received by his American-born wife. The other co-pilot died in a plane crash in England last November.

Air Ministry Announces 169 Nazi Planes Bagged By R.A.F. Over Week-End.

LONDON, June 3.—The flow through southern ports of Allied soldiers evacuating Flanders dwindled to a trickle today as Britons turned their attention to the enemy's next move, watched for possible early action by Italy and continued the fifth column round-up.

The Allied fleets and air forces poured tons of explosives into German forces seeking to close in on Dunkerque, while efforts were made to evacuate the last few thousand troops who covered the retreat that ended with the escape of about 140,000 of the original 175,000 British troops in the area, not to mention several thousand French and some Belgians.

While the nation rejoiced in the rescue of these men, it braced itself simultaneously for the casualty list that will follow when the relatives of the dead, wounded and missing have been informed.

A foretaste of what was to come appeared yesterday with news that the 27-year-old Duke of Northumberland, wealthy coal mine owner and lieutenant in the famous Grenadier Guards, had been killed in the Dunkerque retreat. At the same time it was learned that Evelyn Boscowen, 23, lieutenant in the Coldstream Guards and heir to Viscount Falmouth was killed in the same action.

FIFTH COLUMN DRIVE

Scotland Yard continued its drive on fifth columnists, helped by tips from members of the public. The weekend bag was about 30 more Fascists, including Frank Joyce, 22-year-old Fascist agitator and brother of William Joyce, generally believed to be the Hamburg broadcaster, "Lord Haw-Haw."

Cheering was the news from the air ministry that the week-end bag of German Aircraft destroyed or severely damaged by the Royal Air Force fighters and bombers was 169, including 78 destroyed on saturday. British losses were estimated at 37.

Informed sources said the Mediterranean fleet has been "considerably" strengthened in view of any eventuality and is now more than a match for any sea force Italy could muster in event of her entry into the war.

HAD GONE LIMIT

Diplomatic circles said the Allies had gone as far as they can go in offering to negotiate with Premier Mussolini for satisfaction of Italy's "legitimate aspirations."

It was generally believed here that the coming week would bring an answer to all questions concerning Italy's intentions.

Operations on the active war front, meanwhile, were high lighted by official announcement of new British successes in the air over Dunkerque.

On the home front King George put the prestige of the throne behind a campaign to speed armaments production. The press pictured the King watching a new machine gun during an inspection of an arms factory and he was quoted as telling the workers:

"We've got the men if you can give them weapons."

War Minister Eden also stressed the necessity of stepping up the nation's war industries.

The minister of agriculture, Robert S. Hudson, in line with a program to increase home production, announced that all conscientious objectors to military service would be conscripted for land work and that no farm workers would be permitted to leave the land.

As a defence against parachutists and the landing of troops by planes all road signs were removed and trenches were dug across golf courses.

Paul Bewsher, war correspondent of the Daily Mail, said that the retreat of the northern armies in France "must have added two years to the length of the war." He chided the British public for "living in a dream" from which even "the incredible rearguard fight of the B.E.F." has not awakened it.

HEAVY SACRIFICES

"Britain and France can conquer," he declared. "There is no doubt of that, but they can only conquer if they are prepared to take the most drastic steps and so suffer heavy sacrifices."

The same paper, in an editorial described as "moonshine" stories that "the German soldiers of 1940 are not equal to those of 1914."

"Any delusion that a massive mechanised army could be run by physical weaklings is most fatally absurd," the editorial declared. "The German soldiers who man machines and those who follow them are thoroughly well-trained, disciplined and physically fit. It is unfair to our own soldiers to pretend otherwise."

SEAL TASK

General Henry Ap-Rhys Pryce, 66-year-old retired veteran of the first Great War, said in a letter published in The Times that the war would be won by attack and not defence.

"Our real task now," he said, "is the recapture of the channel ports and an attack on the German forces whose next move obviously cannot be against us, though they will certainly contest certain operations to make us think we are their next objective."

Lord Beaverbrook's Daily Express, commenting on the possibility of Italy's entry into the war, said such an event "would be a further burden to us not to be lightly dismissed," but added:

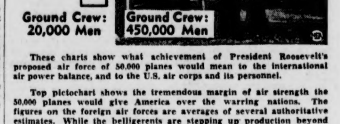

"If Mussolini takes a step against us now it will be the people he dominates who will suffer."

These charts show what achievement of President Roosevelt's proposed air force of 50,000 planes would mean to the international air power balance, and to the U.S. air corps and its personnel.

Top pictochart shows the tremendous margin of air strength the 50,000 planes would give America over the warring nations. The figures on the foreign air forces are averages of several authoritative estimates. While the belligerents are stepping up production beyond that shown on the chart, experts doubt they will be able to augment their air arms greatly.

The chart directly above shows the big increase in personnel necessary to man and service the new planes. The present pilot corps of about 8,000 men would have to be built up to around 100,000; the servicing and supply forces would probably be increased to 450,000. Lines of planes at right show likely division of the new planes on the assumption the whole force might be army planes. Organization navy style would provide more long-distance bombers.

Nazi Leaders Advised Leave Italy Outside, G. Tabouis Declares

PARIS, June 3—Nazi leaders, led by Marshal Hermann Goering, have strongly advised Hitler that Italy must be kept out of the war, both to prevent her from sharing in any possible loot and to keep her pliable to German domination, Genevieve Tabouis wrote today in L'Oeuvre.

Goering was described by the commentator as further arguing that "Germanic justice" requires the Fuehrer to exact eventual vengeance for Italy's anti-German role in the last war.

According to Mme. Tabouis, a poll on the question was taken among ranking Nazi figures by Alfred Rosenberg, the Reich's Nazi "ideologist."

GIVE NO RIGHTS

"These circles declare," she said, "that a Germanic supremacy in Europe is inconceivable if it is aided by alien influences. It would consequently be best to keep Italy out of the war, so she would have no pretensions to rights after victory.

"Furthermore the chieftains and most of the Reich's ranking functionaries are rabid Italophobes. They are all persuaded of the inferiority of the Fascist organization and Italian people as compared to the German people and National Socialist party.

"It is felt that they have the right to impose all German systems and methods on the Italians. They believe that only a non-victorious Mussolini could bow to the orders of the Fuehrer and, in short, accept German superiority.

MOST ANTI-ITALIAN

"Marshal Goering is the most anti-Italian in the fuehrer's immediate entourage. He has repeated that, to his mind, the Italians merit no consideration."

Possible military routes to be followed by Italy should she actually enter the war were brought under review today by the French press.

Henri de Kerillis suggested in l'Epoque that Rome might declare war only against Britain or, on the contrary, concentrate against France.

Georges Giard, writing in De Populaire, said: "Should Mussolini declare to attack, it is believed he would attack not in the direction of the Balkans, but toward Africa or the Alps—perhaps toward both Africa and the Alps.

"In any event Egypt long ago started to take precautions as though danger were imminent and to do the necessary to stave off an attempted invasion by way of Libya.

"Some point out, however, that Italy, whose Libyan troops include many Moslems, would hesitate to attack a Moslem country."

EARL OF ERNE STATED AMONG FLANDERS DEAD

LONDON, June 3.—The Earl of Erne, 32, died today of wounds suffered with the British Expeditionary Force in Flanders.

He was a lieutenant in the Royal Horse Guards, the regiment in which his father, Viscount Chrichton, was serving when killed in action in the first Great War.

Lord Erne succeeded his grandfather in the peerage in 1914, shortly after his father's death. The earl leaves a son, two years old, who succeeds to the title.

Italians Reaffirm Loyalty To Empire

HAMILTON, Ont., June 3.—A resolution reaffirming loyalty to the crown and the empire was passed at a mass feeling of Hamilton Italians Sunday. A second resolution offering use of a large hall to the Dominion government for any purpose required, for duration of the war, also was approved.

GRAIN GROWTH HASTENED BY SPRING RAINS

By CHARLES GUNNING
Canadian Press Staff Writer

WINNIPEG, June 3.—Spring crops news from eastern Canada and major world wheat producing countries is gaining importance as a market factor on Winnipeg grain exchange, with traders scanning closely reports on early grain growth and weather accounts.

Warmer weather over most of the Canadian prairies has hastened growth in many districts and although moisture conditions are somewhat under normal, healthy green shoots of wheat are showing from three to six inches above the ground. Moderate rains in some areas during the weekend gave the new crop picture a brighter hue.

FAVORABLE CONDITIONS

Governmental and private surveys indicate generally favorable growing conditions throughout most of the grainlands from which western farmers reaped almost 400,000,000 bushels of wheat last summer. The exceptions are northwestern Manitoba, northern and central Saskatchewan and a section of northeastern Alberta where moisture has been insufficient.

The seeding of oats and barley, as well as wheat, practically completed, farmers are enjoying a breathing spell in Manitoba, where moisture conditions are only about 12 per cent below normal. At this time last year, Manitoba's moisture situation was almost 35 per cent under normal.

Saskatchewan conditions are less uniform than in the other two provinces although generous week-end rains improved prospects in the northern regions. Some localities received their final moisture since farmers started seeding.

40 PER CENT NORMAL

The rain brought the Saskatchewan moisture situation to within 60 per cent of normal compared with a precipitation position averaging five per cent above normal a year ago.

Reports from central and south-central Saskatchewan indicate that grasshoppers are hatching in scattered areas, with only slight damage noted. Vigorous control measures are being taken in the southwestern districts where hoppers are hatching in large numbers.

The cool, wet weather which held Alberta farmers idle early in the season has subsided, leaving farmlands in that province with the best prairie moisture conditions. Seeding almost completed despite the late start, precipitation is only 10 per cent below normal the same as it was at this time last year.

Roosevelt's Super Air Arm Would Need Larger Crew Than American Army

By BRUCE CATTON
Bulletin Washington Correspondent

WASHINGTON, June 3 — If an air force of 50,000 planes, as suggested by President Roosevelt in his special message to Congress, should become a reality, it would automatically require the raising, training and equipping of a force of men far larger than the entire peace-time strength of the existing American army.

To begin with, there would have to be a huge force of trained pilots, going by current practices in the army and navy, at least two pilots per plane. A number of these, in peace-time, would be in the reserve; nevertheless, they would have to be trained and would have to spend part of their time each year on duty.

Next there would be needed a very greatly augmented ground force.

Simply to care for the planes required today approximately 10 men per plane. Those include the mechanics who wheel the plane out, the ship force which services it, the guards at the hangars, office staff and so on. This proportion would diminish as the number of planes increased; and it is probable that with 50,000 planes it could be cut to a five-to-one ratio, or a total ground force of 250,000 men.

But that does not constitute all of the ground forces needed to keep the air fleet in fighting trim. An elaborate supply corps would have to be built up. Estimating its size is pure guess-work; one guess offered by an officer who is in a good position to judge, is that the supply corps would have to be between 200,000 and 250,000 men.

NEED 12,500 TRAINER PLANES

Trying to figure out the numbers of different types of ships that should be built is difficult until it is known how the total force would be divided between the army and navy. Whatever the proportion, it is pretty certain at least 12,500 planes would be trainers.

On the assumption that the whole force might be army planes, it could be guessed that some 5,000 would be heavy bombers, around 17,500 would be pursuit planes, and 15,000 would be more or less evenly divided into observation planes, light bombers and ground-attack planes. It might also be figured that probably 10,000 planes, or 25 per cent of all the planes outside of the trainer class, would be put in reserve.

Organized navy style, approximately one-third of the total number would be long-distance bombers of the flying-boat type. Perhaps half that many would be seaplanes of the kind carried on cruisers and battleships; the balance would be land-type fighters and light bombers.

PLANES WOULD REDUCE ANTI-AIRCRAFT NEEDS

In one branch of the service the raising of a 50,000-plane air force would make possible a proportionate reduction—in anti-aircraft defense.

Anti-aircraft units are not fixed in proportion to a country's own air service, but are, theoretically, geared to the air force of possible rivals. As one's own air force is strengthened, one's anti-aircraft force can be diminished. In theory, a nation possessing 50,000 war planes would require no anti-aircraft force to a bare minimum.

There could be no real reduction in the U.S. Army, however, because the anti-aircraft strength today is negligible. An excellent authority states that all the anti-aircraft units in the U.S. army put together would not be sufficient to protect New York City alone from attack. Whatever happens to the U.S. air force, then, the anti-aircraft defense is going to be strengthened.

KING GEORGE TESTS GUNS IN BREN FACTORY

LONDON, June 3—The King tried out a Bren machine-gun yesterday and got 60 shots in or close to the bullseye at 200 yards while a score of army officers, munitions officials and newspapermen watched.

"I had no idea it was so steady," H. Majesty said as the last bullet shot toward the target.

The King spent two hours in a Sunday tour of a gun factory where, under the stress of war-time manufacturing, operations now go on seven days a week.

He watched glowing steel beam pounded into gun barrels under ponderous pneumatic hammers and workers tooling precision instruments.

He saw, too, the first rifles brought back from Flanders for repair. They were rusty with sea water and the wooden stocks were streaked white with salt from the Channel crossing.

From the testing rooms and ranges there came a continual rattle of gunfire. The King saw all kinds of small arms in all stages of production.

Americans Will Petition F.D.R. To Assist Allies

NEW YORK, June 3.—A drive to obtain 600,000 signatures to a petition calling on President Roosevelt to give "the fullest possible support to the Allies" short of war started in New York today as the first step in the nation-wide campaign of the Committee To Defend America By Aiding the Allies. William Allen White, editor of the Emporia (Kan.) Gazette, is chairman of the committee.

Victory Will Be With Allies Next Time Says Gort

LONDON, June 3—"We shall meet them again," declared Viscount Gort, commander of the British expeditionary force, on his return Saturday from Flanders. "The next time victory will be with us."

Viscount Gort was quoted by a British Broadcasting Corporation commentator who witnessed his arrival as declaring: "It is not the arrival of myself that matters. It is the arrival of my army."

Heir To Throne Of Greece Born

ATHENS, Greece, June 3—A son, heir to the Greek throne, was born Sunday to Crown Princess Frederika, Greece's King, George II, is childless and his brother, Prince Paul, to whom the son was born, is next in line of succession.

Turkey Ready To Repel Aggression

ANKARA, Turkey, June 3—Premier Refik Saydam told the nation last night that Turkey wants to stay out of the war but warned the nation to be ready at any moment to defend the country. He declared Turkey's army is "ready to repel any aggression from any side."

ITALY DEFERS FAIR IN ROME; CALLS UP MEN

Residents Of Turin Advised Leave For Country Districts

ROME, June 3. — The Italian government today announced the indefinite postponement of the 1942 Rome Exposition, which Premier Mussolini once referred to as proof that Italy was not planning to go to war.

The reason given for the postponement was that several nations had requested more time to prepare exhibits.

Italy's "behind the scenes" military mobilization proceeded with the pink cards which call up reservists being delivered at additional homes every mail.

Residents of Turin, the industrial centre close to the French frontier, were urged by the press to depart for country districts.

TURKEY PLEASES

Fascist circles found cause for satisfaction in an address which Premier Reyfid Saydam of Turkey broadcast yesterday to his nation. Although Saydam declared that Turkey was ready to take up arms "in defence of the fatherland," he failed to mention Turkey's mutual assistance pact with Great Britain and France—a fact to which Fascist commentators attached great importance.

Many Seeking Ship Passage

ROME, June 3.—A considerable number of Canadian, British, Australian and French visitors to Italy today sought to leave in the United States refugee ships President Harrison and Excambion, due to sail today or tomorrow, but the ships already were reported fully booked.

An undetermined number of Canadians were among would-be passengers when the steamship Manhattan sailed for Genoa yesterday. Some of them were reported to have booked passage but have neglected or failed to obtain exit visas which the Italian government now demands of all citizens of Allied countries seeking to leave Italy.

NAZIS BOMB TWO BRITISH HOSPITAL SHIPS

LONDON, June 30.—Two British hospital ships, the Worthing and Paris, were bombed and machine-gunned by German planes off the French coast Sunday, it was announced here today. Neither had British expeditionary force wounded aboard.

A 17-year-old boy was killed on one of the ships.

The Paris was abandoned. The Worthing was towed to port.

The 1,790-ton Paris was attacked last night by three bombers which first dropped flares, then bombs and, on our later, returned and machine-gunned the crew and Royal Army Medical Corps personnel at Le Havre dock to boats.

Tugs brought them to an English southeast port.

The 2,326-ton Worthing was attacked six miles off Dunkerque by nine German planes but returned to a southern port.

Brother Of Lord Haw Haw Confined In Brixton Jail

LONDON, June 3—Frank Joyce, 22-year-old brother of William Joyce, identified in some British quarters as "Lord Haw Haw," the pro-Nazi broadcaster, was arrested Saturday under Britain's defence regulations and confined to Brixton jail, it was announced this morning.

Another brother, Quentin, 28, an air ministry official until the outbreak of the war, has been interned for some time for propaganda activities.

Frank was employed on the British Broadcasting Company technical staff until early this year.

The brothers were members of the National Socialist League, a Fascist organization, which was disbanded last August.

U.S. Could Fly 1,000 Warplanes to Allies If Decision Is Reached

By JOHN LEAR
Associated Press Staff Writer

WASHINGTON, June 3.—The United States could fly 1,000 fighting airplanes across the Atlantic Ocean to aid England and France within the next three weeks if the people of this country should decide to do that far to "stop Hitler."

I received this information from a man I am not permitted to quote but whose knowledge on the subject is not open to question.

COULD TURN BALANCE

There is no indication such a move is contemplated. On the contrary, a proposal to do it has been rebuffed. The facts were recited to me merely as an illustration of the true picture of U.S. defences.

Although these 1,000 planes represent only a fraction of the flying force of 50,000 envisaged by President Roosevelt, they would be enough in the opinion of some military experts to turn the balance of airpower in the war between the Allies and Hitler's legions.

The fact that all of them could fly the Atlantic is evidence of their size and power.

Perhaps more important is the fact that the bombers among them are equipped with a bomb sight which military men say makes their aim as accurate as that of a crack rifle shot.

To dispatch such an air armada abroad would exhaust all the first line warcraft of that flying range now in hand in both the army and the navy.

ARE NOT SATISFIED

Neither the army nor the navy is satisfied with the size of the present air fleet, which numbers 1,200 army and 1,000 navy fighters of all types. New plane production is now proceeding at a rate of 340 military planes a month. By late summer under existing schedules this will be pushed up to 800 and by December to 1,200 a month.

Lack of manpower and equipment was revealed at Senate appropriation committee hearings in May. Army air corps spokesmen there said that no matter how many planes they might buy, the military program as then outlined would provide the necessary men for only 1,985 combat ships.

Aged French Gardener

'Pop-Pop' Man Of Rheims Not So 'Touched'

Blasts German Plane

British United Press Exclusive Cable to The Edmonton Bulletin

LONDON, June 3.—A sixty-year-old French gardener, once described as "un peu touche"—a little touched in the head—is now the inspiration for thousands of British civilian home defenders.

The gardener lived on an estate in Rheims. He was too old for military service, but when the Germans started their big push, he got his old, second-hand Swedish machine gun out of the attic of his little cottage.

He had spent most of his savings the gun when the war started last September. His constant polishing of the gun and his pride in its ownership was a source of much amusement of the wits in the Rheims grog shops.

But one day a German bomber reached the edge of the town after the invasion of the low countries and military machine gunners blazed away and missed.

The bomber was too low for the heavy anti-aircraft guns. But the gardener was waiting with his finger on the trigger of his pet. It popped faithfully and the German bomber bit the dust.

Now the "pop-pop" man of Rheims is the pride of his town and his feat is cited in London as an inspiration for Britain's thousands of "parashootists."

VERSATILE SPONGE CAKE

There is no more versatile cake than the perfect sponge. Good by itself, iced or plain, it is the right accompaniment to fresh or stewed fruits, ice creams or with custard or fruit sauces. Sponge cakes are baked in ungreased pans allowed to cool in the pan in which they are baked, then loosened around the edges with a silver knife and inverted on rack. Cutting sponge cake toughens it; separate the pieces carefully with a fork.

Mr. Kelner Was Victim Of Stomach Distress and Indigestion; Sleep Disturbed At Nights By Gaseous Bloating; Felt Weak, Nervous; But Now Mosby's Tonic Has Relieved Him. "I Feel Fine Again!" He Says. "It's a Splendid Medicine!"

MR. E. KELNER of 619 18th Ave., N.W., Calgary, Alta. Had Years of Suffering Before He Found Relief With Mosby's Tonic. "I Feel Fine Now." He says His Complete Statement Appears Herein.

Widely-known people, living throughout Edmonton and all over Alberta, are now coming forward with gratifying and sincere words of publicly praising and endorsing this "New Mixture of Roots and Herbs and Other Splendid Agents" known as MOSBY'S TONIC which is now being introduced to crowds daily here in Edmonton, at The Army and Navy Dept. Store. Mr. E. Special Mosby's Tonic Representative, direct from the Mosb; Tonic Laboratories. For instance just a few days ago, Mr. E. Kelner of 619 18th Ave., N.W. Calgary, Alta., offered his photograph and statement for publication, describing the Splendid Relief he got from Mosby's Tonic. Following is his Sincere Testimonial which is worth reading:

Gassiness, Heartburn Followed Every Meal

"Mosby's Tonic has relieved me of so much suffering that I feel it is my duty to tell others about it, and I will verify every word I say in this statement of mine, for I think Cow, Sask. Engr. Mr. H. Engley, Mrs. Mistect, Mrs. S. S. Langille, Mrs. R. Montgomery, Mrs. M. Gray, Mrs. Laing, Mrs. A. Castle, Mrs. Williams, Mr. E. E. Baker, Mrs. C. Ady, Mrs. F. J. Fitzpatrick, Mrs. L. Lynch, Mrs. H. Birth, Mrs. G. McKenzie, Mrs. E. Flowers, Mrs. R. Reagan and W. Humphreys, Mrs. J. Spence and the Misses N. Kew, V. Nelson, V. Lang, M. Doran, E. Doran, D. Williams, M. Lynch, and I. Spence Kelner. "I certainly suffer. In fact, I got to a place where I was so gassy, so gaseous, bloated stomach that I was AFRAID TO EAT. Heartburn and gas pains followed every meal, no matter how little I ate. It seemed that every kind of food I liked the best would cause me the most suffering. Those gas pains would continue at nights and break my rest. I was also nervous from so much suffering and felt weak and worn out.

First Dose of Mosby's Tonic Gave Relief

"Well, I suffered so long I was fully discouraged. I tried various medicines but got no real relief. Then recently I found Mosby's Tonic. I started feeling better from the very first dose of it. I was really surprised the way this medicine acted on my stomach. It relieved the gas pains and heartburn and seemed to move loads of gas from my stomach. I continued with Mosby's Tonic and have taken only 3 bottles. Now I am not afraid to eat. I enjoy the foods I couldn't eat before and my whole system is new. I can sleep fine at nights and don't get nervous and feel tired as I used to. In fact, I feel fine again in every way. Yes Mosby's Tonic is splendid, just like people say it is and I am PROUD to be endorsing it."

It Helps To Clear Away The Poisonous Wastes

MOSBY'S TONIC helps to clear away poisonous wastes from the system in several ways at once—that is it acts as a carminative, laxative, emmenague, and diuretic all at the same time and helps cleanse the bowels, assists to clean excess impurities from kidneys bringing forth gas and bloat from stomach and eliminates the poisons from the body people write us they soon feel like different men and women as a result of this cleansing and invigorating action of Mosby's Tonic. Another thing—due to the immense volume of which it sells, the price of Mosby's Tonic is reasonable. So don't hesitate. Get Mosby's Tonic—TODAY!

A Special Mosby's Tonic Representative, known as The MOSBY TONIC man is now at The ARMY AND NAVY DEPT STORE, Edmonton, daily meeting crowds of people and introducing and explaining this New Compound.

Know Your Parliamentary Rules

An enthusiastic member, interested in club affairs. Yet she'll never be asked to hold office, so little does she know of the principles of public speaking, of parliamentary rules.

Fellow members are amused as she leaps to her feet and blurts out, "Madame Chairman, I make a motion, we give a dance."

Parliamentary procedure requires you to be recognized by the chair before making a motion and the correct form is "I move that——" Then another member must second your motion.

Learn these simple rules, as well as pointers on public speaking, and you can create a delightful impression.

When making a speech you have an air of quiet authority if you walk to your place slowly, pausing a moment before you talk.

Your voice rings out clearly if you have practised reading aloud, throwing your tones to the front of your mouth.

Know how to be at your best when speaking in public. Our 32-page booklet gives parliamentary rules, sample talks for many occasions. Has advice on voice training, preparing and presenting speeches; tips for toastmasters, radio speakers.

Send 15c in coins for your copy of "Public Speaking Self-Taught" to The Edmonton Bulletin, Home Service, Edmonton, Alberta. Be sure to write plainly your name, address, and the name of booklet.

"Vaccine" comes from the word "vacca," meaning cow, since cattle furnished the virus with which the scientist Jenner conquered smallpox.

The urge to cut down on kitchen time in the "merrie month of June" brings us to the subject of quick frozen meats, fish, fruits and vegetables. For summer cooking, either in the city or at your shack in the woods or at the beach. They solve the eating problem deliciously.

In order to get best results, follow carefully the instructions printed on package for thawing and cooking. If these quick frozen foods cost a few cents more, remember that there is no waste. During vacation, a few extra cents are permitted in the budget.

SWORDFISH WITH CUCUMBER SAUCE
(Serves six)

One box quick-frozen swordfish steaks, broiled; 1½ cups finely chopped cucumber, 1 teaspoon salt, ¼ teaspoon pepper, 1 teaspoon scraped onion, 1¼ to 2 tablespoons vinegar.

To broil swordfish, spread swordfish steaks (frozen or thawed) with softened butter and sprinkle with salt and pepper. Place on well-greased broiler and broil 10 to 12 minutes, turning to brown both sides. Serve with cucumber sauce.

For cucumber sauce, drain cucumber; add remaining ingredients and mix lightly. Chill.

TWELVEMONTH STRAWBERRY TAPIOCA
(Serves four)

One box (1 lb.) quick-frozen sliced strawberries, thawed; 1 cup strawberry juice and water, 2 tablespoons quick-cooking tapioca, dash of salt.

Drain berries and add water to juice to make 1 cup. Combine strawberry juice and water, quick cooking tapioca, sugar and salt in saucepan and mix well. Bring mixture quickly to a full boil over direct heat, stirring constantly. Remove from fire. (Mixture will be thin. Do not overcook.) Add fruit. Cool, stirring occasionally—mixture thickens as it cools. Chill. Serve with plain or whipped cream.

Your Figure, Madame!

By IDA JEAN KAIN

Whether you have it or lack it, appetite is very apt to be the underlying cause of your weight problem. But if the overweight, be one who craves food practically all the time, could only step into the thin girl's shoes for a day, she might discover that it can be harder to eat than to diet!

Emulating that certain man on the trapeze is a fine way to beautify the chest and shoulders, and our pretty demonstrator is the screen starlet Cecelia Parker.

There are some who are underweight simply because they are too busy—or believe they are—to pay proper attention to meal hours and to food in general. If you are one of these pre-occupied thin girls, you will have to acquire more respect for food. You can't afford to miss a meal or to delay it too long. And if you have been in the habit of dashing off to work with only a sip of coffee and a bite of toast for breakfast, you'll have to stop it. To you, breakfast is a highly important meal—it's your chance to take on one-third of the calories you need for energy during the day!

But the majority of you underweights realize how important food is to you and you do everything in your power to gain. The trouble is you can't force yourselves to eat. A recent letter from a thin girl states that she doesn't even like food and has no appetite, but that she is acutely embarrassed about her thinness and is willing to do anything to gain. She promises:

The underweight needs mild outdoor exercise.

"If you will just send me a gaining diet, I'll eat every last thing on it if I have to choke it down!"

She has the right attitude. But, since appetite is the promise to take care of food, there's not much use in choking it down. In this instance, the first step is to find out the reason for the poor appetite.

Food habits themselves may be at fault. Anyone who eats too little runs a risk of getting far too little Vitamin B1. This is the appetite vitamin. It is also the vitamin which contributes to good muscle tone, to a healthy nervous system, and which participates in the liberation of energy. All these factors may be tied up in the underweight's problem.

Foods rich in Vitamin B1 are: Whole grains, yeast, yeast products, wheat germ, whole wheat bread, liver, kidney, beans and peas. Other good sources are milk, leafy vegetables, fruits and eggs. In other words, a well balanced diet tends to develop a normal appetite.

In many cases, the use of B1 in the form of thiamin chloride is successful in promoting a normal appetite. Ask your doctor about it.

When you are too tired to eat, you not only eat less but you assimilate less and it may be that the solution for you is to rest more. It is an excellent plan to rest before eating whenever possible.

Exercise also has its place, and an important one, in the weight-gaining plan. A normal amount of exercise makes for a better circulation, better digestion and better assimilation. Every add up to a healthier body. That doesn't mean that you should attempt exercise beyond your strength. Stick to the mild variety and, if possible, take it outdoors in the fresh air, allowing plenty of rest afterwards.

Here are three rules which the underweight should live by until she has gained the desired weight: First, never hurry, for that produces an increasing amount of tension. Second, take enough time to eat three good meals a day. Third, spend some part of every day out of doors.

BALANCED WEIGHT-GAINING MENU

Breakfast: Orange juice, hot cereal, cream, poached egg on buttered toast, coffee with heavy cream.

Luncheon: Vegetable soup, asparagus tips on toast, crisp bacon, avocado, orange and watercress salad (French dressing), roll, glass of milk.

Before retiring: Glass of milk.

Your dietitian, Ida Jean Kain.

Your Baby And Mine

By MYRTLE MEYER ELDRED

There isn't a mother but who experiences an actual shock of surprise and dismay when she discovers her child has suddenly developed a will of its own. It's so easy to manage the tiny baby that she isn't prepared for this small tyrant who won't open her mouth, or accommodate herself to sensy toilet habits or stop touching the objects Mama says she cannot touch.

Gentle, or even firm, no-nos may not help. The baby can play no-no, too, and say it with emphasis. But, for her own good, she has to learn that she can't jump off the davenport, stick her inquisitive fingers into the electric-light sockets or hang onto the lamp cord. She has to learn. Right there is the key to the problem. None of us—baby or adult—learns quickly when learning is colored by punishment. We learn by being praised for doing the right thing and, as far as possible, being prevented from doing the wrong thing.

ANNOYING PERIOD

When you are going through that very tiresome and annoying period when your children, just graduated from the playpen, seem intent upon making a shambles of the house, keep telling yourself what it is you are trying to do. You want the child to learn to live in her home and your home. She can't learn unless you let her act as she pleases, most of the time, and inhibit her activities only when necessary.

Constant frustration of a baby's activities creates temper tantrums. But you can stop the wrong activities by diverting the child's attention. It's so easy with young children. Take the object you don't want handled out of the baby's hand and say, "Here baby can have her ball." Then roll the ball to her, or bounce it in the air.

When there are so many small objects that can't be touched that baby would grow confused, remove some of them out of sight and reach. Then, if you have the time, concentrate on one object until baby begins to shake her own head and move away when you say, "No, no, dear, not that! Here is your ball."

The more things a child can touch uninhibited the more easily she will learn not to touch those she can't have. The child can develop and be happy unless she can carry out the major proportion of the activities she attempts. In time and if it takes time and patience—by these methods, and not punishment the child will learn.

Any reader interested may obtain the leaflet, "Early Discipline," for the usual three-cent stamped, self-addressed envelope sent in with a request to Mrs. Eldred of Your Baby and Mine department in care of The Edmonton Bulletin.

Myrtle Meyer Eldred will answer your questions about diet, general care and management of children if you will send a three-cent stamped, self-addressed envelope with your letter to Mrs. Eldred of the Your Baby and Mine department in care of The Edmonton Bulletin.

What To Do

Will you kindly tell me if I made a mistake and if I did—what should I have done? Several weeks after I received the announcement of the marriage of my former employer's daughter I sent her a wedding present and enclosed my card. This was several months ago, and I have never had an acknowledgment. I feel I must have made a mistake.

A READER.

Answer—Certainly nothing you did was wrong. In fact, it was very generous of you to send a gift, because an announcement of a marriage puts you under no obligation whatever. But the bride, on the contrary, if she received your present and has not acknowledged it, is guilty of great rudeness. She should have written you a note of thanks at once. There is no greater breach of etiquette than failing to say "thank you" for a gift. There is a possibility that the gift never reached her or was received without your card, and that she is waiting to write till she knows to whom gratitude is due. Why not check up at the shop where you purchased the gift?

Often the back view of your coiffure may prove startlingly unattractive. If you want to be sure your hair is well groomed and well arranged all around, why not try an arrangement which will give it a symmetric contour? The off-the-face roll in a circular pompadour effect may be the answer.

Naval officers say there is nothing to the idea that a captain must go down with his ship. There never has been any such tradition in the navy. The only obligation on the captain is to see that every man on his ship is saved or taken off before he himself leaves. The captain is the last person to leave the ship. In the World War No. 1, the United States cruiser San Diego was sunk by a mine near Fire Island, New York, and the commander, Captain Harley Christy, escaped from the sinking ship, along with his men, and was later promoted. Captain Hans Langsdorff did not go down with the Graf Spee; neither did any "traditional" of the navy compel him to take his life later.

There are more than 200 air hostesses employed in the United States.

Chambrun Flying Inform Roosevelt

PARIS, June 3—Count Rene de Chambrun, just returned from the Battle of Flanders, was reported to be flying to Washington today to inform President Roosevelt on French military operations. Nephew of the late Nicholas Longworth, speaker of the United States House of Representatives, he is a descendant of Lafayette, whose hereditary United States citizenship he inherited.

Blood Parasite Hard On Ducks

ALBANY, N.Y., June 3—Discovery of a form of blood fluid parasite never previously reported in North America was announced by New York's conservation department today as possibly "highly important clue" to the winter mortality of wild ducks. The parasite, present in 35 per cent of the 45 wild ducks found dead throughout the state since January, apparently causes severe inflammation boils in the intestines and liver.

Bishop Appeals For Mission Fund

MONTREAL, June 3—Rt. Rev. H. D. Martin, Anglican bishop of Saskatchewan, appealed for continued support of the missions in western Canada in an address at the Church of St. James the Apostle here last night. Bishop Martin said sufficient funds are not available to subsidize the number of missionaries required to attend to the spiritual needs of Indians in western Canada.

Ralph Waldo Emerson once defined a great story as one which would evoke both tears and laughter.

Out Our Way

58 Survivors Of Sunken Steamship Reach New York

NEW YORK, June 3—Fifty-eight survivors of the Belgian liner Ville de Bruges, formerly the United States liner President Harding, which was bombed and sunk off the British coast May 31, arrived Saturday on a British liner.

Simon W. Crabbe of Charlottetown, P.E.I., senior officer of the group, told of a terrific strafing by aerial machine-gunners shortly before a bomb struck the ship, killing four men, and causing her to be beached. Two of those killed were Canadians.

The survivors arriving here were crew members, most of them Canadians. A crew of 115 and a passenger list of 64, principally women refugees and a few children from Belgium, were saved.

Germany Asking For Volunteers As Air Officers

BERLIN, June 3—Morning newspapers today published an appeal to "adventureasome, energetic German youth" to volunteer for training as air force officers.

The British Broadcasting Corporation, in a broadcast picked up in New York by the National Broadcasting Company, said an appeal it had heard over the German radio was indicative that the German air force had suffered heavy losses. The British air ministry has computed Germany's losses in the air as three to one in favor of the Allies.

Debt Adjustment Act Powers Are Under Review

Whether the permit before starting court action provision of Alberta's debt adjustment act applies to promissory notes and bills of exchange is the legal question the appeal court is being asked to decide in the appeal brought by the attorney-general of Alberta from a judgment of Mr. Justice A. F. Ewing.

The judgment declared that the act, insofar as it dealt with promissory notes and bills of exchange, was of no effect as the federal bills of exchange act governed all court action in such matters.

Mr. Justice Ewing's judgment was rendered in the test case brought by the Atlas Lumber Company to recover from a Calgary business man $1,000 owing on a promissory note given for material supplied. The company proceeded to action without first obtaining a permit from the Debt Adjustment Board. The hearing is proceeding.

King's Brother To Be Delegate To Portugal

LONDON, June 3—The King is sending his brother, the Duke of Kent, to represent him at the June celebration of the eighth centenary of Portuguese independence. Visconti Halifax, foreign secretary, announced today.

Reward For Adolf Has Now Expired

PITTSBURGH, June 3—Dr. Samuel Harden Church, president of Carnegie Institute, announced saturday the $1,000,000 reward offer for the capture of Adolf Hitler "unfortunately" has not been claimed and "has now expired."

New York Stocks

NEW YORK, June 3.—With the war news interpreted as slightly bearish, leading stocks generally backed water in today's market. Declines ranged from fractions to about 3 points.

The list got off to a fairly good start with steels, coppers and specialties on the advancing side. The steel group was the first to retreat.

Bombing of Paris and continued fears of Italy entering the conflict soon tended to dampen buying ardor, brokers said.

Broomhall

The Argentine issued an official crop report Saturday which confirmed good general rains in May which improved the seedbed. Corn picking was temporarily delayed and the quality impaired in some localities but the yield was not affected and the remaining surplus for export is still considered to be around 310,000,000 bushel or more than double what was on hand at this time last year. The weather in the U.S. remains favorable, clear in the southwest and much warmer, while in the corn belt there were a few showers. Estimates of the new crops are being raised and it is believed that the U.S. may raise a total wheat crop of 720,000,000 bushels, oats 1,050,000,000 bushels, compared to 937,000,00 a year ago and rye 38,50,000 bushels compared to 39,850,000 bushels last year. Many believe that the hay crops will be very abundant this summer. Great Britain bought 50,000,000 bushels Canadian wheat on Friday at a price reported to be well above present market price. We figure that this is the first purchase since they took about 15,000,000 from the Argentine for future shipment. Previously the buying orders had been held down to around 10 or at a maximum 20,000,000 bushels at one time. The great number of refugees in England and France will necessitate increased flour production so that it is no longer possible to estimate the Allies wheat requirements. This transaction was apparently between the Canadian Wheat Board and the British Cereal Import Committee and did not pass through the usual export channels.

IPSWICH, Eng.—Refusing to believe reports that her 21-year-old son was killed in action, Mrs. Caroline Mallett listened to German broadcasts and heard an announcement her son was alive and well.

AIRMEN WILL GO OVERSEAS EVERY MONTH

would have swelled the ranks of our instructors, are proceeding overseas immediately.

"Fighter and bombing planes ready for immediate action in France have already been despatched to the United Kingdom and others are awaiting suitable transportation.

INCREASE INDUSTRY

"Immediate action is being taken to greatly increase Canadian aircraft industry not only to take the place, where possible, of the machines which the United Kingdom was to have sent for the training plan but to provide the mother country with an ever-increasing number of fighter and bomber craft for active service.

"In order to obviate delays, special powers have been granted to the department of transport and to the department of munitions and supply which will enable them to proceed with the letting of contracts for the construction of airdromes, buildings and for the manufacture and purchase of essential equipment and supplies with a very minimum of delay.

"While maintaining the framework of the British Commonwealth air training plan and proceeding with its development so that at the earliest possible moment it can be geared to capacity again, every effort is being directed towards the maximum output of pilots, air gunners and air observers, in the shortest possible time for overseas service and a steady flow of pilots, and subsequently of air crews generally, will proceed overseas monthly from now onwards to join operational squadrons of the R.A.F.

RECRUITING PLANS

"Details are being worked out to call up immediately some thousands of young men for service in the Royal Canadian Air Force and their training for any emergency will be undertaken at the earliest possible moment."

Germany's drive to the channel ports made necessary a revision of plans but before that, said Mr. Duncan, when the events in Norway were casting their shadows upon the European scene, "the impelling necessity of making a more immediate contribution was obvious to us.

"Steps were being taken to superimpose upon the existing British Commonwealth air training plan other proposals which would enable us in some measure at least to achieve this end."

SHIPMENTS SUSPENDED

Before that had materialized, however, the invasion of the low countries created a wholly new picture.

"With huge enemy forces driving towards the channel ports the United Kingdom called upon us to send such assistance as could be made available while, with an eye to the future, maintaining as intact as possible, the schedules of the joint air training plan."

At the same time the United Kingdom reluctantly made known that she was suspending, for the time being and as a precautionary measure, the supplying of the aircraft which according to the plans she was sending Canada for training purposes and as the British contribution to the $600,000,000 total cost of the plan.

"Let us look forward, not backward," said Mr. Duncan. "Let us concentrate our effort and single-minded purposes on the job to be done now and upon plans for the future."

Honorary Air Marshal Bishop, director of recruiting in the R.C.A.F., said there was no question of the enduring qualities and the power of the British race but the technique and methods of war have changed "and now we must adapt ourselves to new weapons, new conditions and new tactics."

"Amongst all the sinister weapons designed and developed for use against the peoples whom Hitler would crush and destroy, one of the most insidious was defeatism," he said.

FIFTH COLUMN IS CONDEMNED BY MINISTER

Dr. MacDonald Urges Steps To Fight "Germ"; Rabbi Eisen Speaks

In a stirring indictment of those "fifth columnists" who sowed the seed of treachery in Poland, Norway, Holland and Belgium and even today are working in France, England and even in Canada, Rev. Dr. George A. MacDonald told a congregation which filled every available seat in Knox church Sunday night that steps must be taken immediately to "Eradicate this spurious germ."

He likened the treachery by which these brave nations were betrayed to the treachery of Judas Iscariot who sold his soul and His Master for 30 pieces of silver. And he emphasized that this fifth column holds within itself the insidious seeds of its own destruction, just as Judas Iscariot, when he finally faced the horror of his own miserable deed went out into the darkness.

GIVES ORIGIN

He told how the term "fifth column" originated during the Spanish war. Four columns were attacking the city. The defending general told his people: "Those four I know, but there is a fifth column that passes unknown to me because it is here amidst us, it dresses as we do, it talks as we do and it eats at our table and when the time comes it will arise and betray us."

"It can be said that Jesus of Nazareth was a victim of fifth column activity because he was wounded in the house of a friend," said Dr. MacDonald. "The fifth column in our own country refers to those who have partaken of our hospitality, participated in the rewards and blessings of a great free land and who now, when the nation is faced with the insidious doctrines and poison arrows of Nazism prostitute these gifts and desecrate the confidence our country has placed in them.

"To eradicate this spurious germ our country will have to develop high moral culture and character values without which our democracy is not fit to survive," he declared.

"In these days we may regard treachery toward friends and benefactors as the final infamy; for that is more destructive than the missiles of navies, millions of armed men or clouds of bombers that darken the skies."

EISEN SPEAKS

Dr. MacDonald was assisted by Rabbi Eisen who also spoke on fifth column and its activities.

Special music for the service was supplied under the direction of M. Mawer, organist, by Wilma Sutherland, soprano, and Mrs. Tait and her stringed orchestra.

Rev. Dillwyn T. Evans of Killam, Alberta, was guest preacher at both the Sunday services at First Presbyterian church.

Speaking on "Deeds, Not Words," Rev. Daniel Young occupied the pulpit of First Baptist church on Sunday morning. Following the Sunday evening service, the minister spoke on "Living Consistently."

Special services were held at Metropolitan United church on Sunday morning when there was a children's day service. The junior choir of 40 voices, under the direction of Mrs. James Asbridge, with R. R. Cooper at the organ, was heard. In the evening the Old Timers' Association of Edmonton attended church in a body.

Special Women's Missionary Society services were held at Westminster Baptist church, Sunday morning, when the speaker was Mrs. W. D. Hildred. A Young People's Society service was conducted there Sunday evening.

Reports 'Quake

ARCHIE McMULLEN, veteran Mackenzie Air Service pilot, who completed the first mail flight to Aklavik of the summer season, returning to the city over the weekend. He brought back reports of an earthquake at the far northern port.

SLIGHT 'QUAKE REPORTED FOR NORTH POINT

Visions of blitzkrieg swept through the heads of hardy northerners last Tuesday, May 28, when an earthquake, severe enough to stop clocks and break china and pottery on cupboard shelves shook the district around Aklavik at the mouth of the Mackenzie River.

Word of the tremblor, which occurred at 3.38 p.m., was brought by Pilot Archie McMullen, of Mackenzie Air Service, on his return to the city over the weekend after completing the first flight of the summer season to the far northern trading centre.

H. P. Courtney, wife of the engineer on the H.B.C. steamer Liard River, flew to Edmonton with Pilot McMullen and told newsmen that she and her husband were just sitting down to dinner when the tremblor struck. The house shook for about five minutes, she said.

At the Anglican mission school the children were just sitting down to supper when the dishes began to dance around the tables. One of the youngsters let out the cry, "The Germans are in the cellar." It was taken up by others and only immediate intervention of officials prevented a panic.

The quake which was also felt at Macpherson, is the second experienced in the north this winter, a slight one being recorded in December.

THE QUESTION

"Do you think the government should pay for the dollar egg rings as they did for sow thistles a few years ago?" asks Mrs. T. Harris, 10759 79 avenue, to win The Bulletin's dollar prize for the best question entered for this column today.

THE ANSWERS

GLADYS DENNINGTON, florist: The amount of damage caterpillars are going to do to trees in this district this year is going to be terrible, if we can judge from what happened in the foliage during the last pest invasion several years ago. I think it would be a good idea to give some sort of bounty for the eggs, but the drive would have to be started early in the year.

* * *

BILL RAYNER, radio continuity writer: Blitzkrieg seems to be the fashion this spring and it looks as if the caterpillars have taken a page out of Hitler's nasty book. The pest can be stamped out just as effectively as Hitler will be if the city launches a quick counter-attack on these crawling destroyers. While it would be a good idea for the government to give citizens remuneration for this work, nature-lovers should be prepared to do it free of charge.

* * *

ANGUS McPHEE, city employee: Citizens got enough warning from Prof. Strickland at the University about the caterpillar plague and if the steps now advised were taken to combat the menace, the destruction should be less than it was the last time the pests paid a call. The government needs every cent we can lay our hands on for the war effort, and in my opinion the anti-caterpillar campaign should be done by citizens at their own expense. The solution used to kill the insects is not very expensive.

Baby Flies

Honors for air travel for children seem to belong to Paula Frances Stanton, 3-month-old daughter of Dr. and Mrs. O. L. Stanton of Vellowknife. On Sunday the little lady accompanied by her parents, flew to Yellowknife with Alf Caywood of Canadian Airways after flying to the city from Toronto. Altogether she has flown nearly 8,500 miles in her three months of life, or about 70 miles per day.

400 VETERANS ANSWER CALL FOR SERVICE

Two Platoons Of 78 Men Will Be Enlisted For Home Guards

Responding to the call for World War veterans to enlist in No. 13 Company, Veterans Home Guard, more than 400 ex-servicemen flooded four registration centres on Sunday to place their names on the list for selection for enlistment Monday.

Enlistment was carried on at the Prince of Wales Armory Monday under supervision of Lt. Col. E. Brown, M.M., D.D. Area Commandant.

In all 78 men or two platoons, will be enlisted in this city. Allocation for enlistment follow: Canadian Corps Association and Canadian Legion 25 each; Imperial War Veterans' Association, nine, and Army and Navy Vets, four. There will be eight officers appointed.

PRIORITY

Selection of men is being made on the following priority: 1, those who served in an actual theatre of war; 2, those who served in the United Kingdom only; 3, those who served only in Canada.

All men are being enlisted as privates and promotions, up to establishment allowed, on probation for three months, are being made by the company commanding officer. On completion of probation, N.C.O.'s may be confirmed in rank.

All men will be warned before enlistment that they will be subject to discipline under the Army Act in the same manner as the regular army.

There was widespread enthusiasm among veterans for enlistment. More than 100 applied at the Corps Association and Legion offices Sunday, while nearly as many applied at the other two organizations from which veterans will be drawn.

The organizations are recommending their members for enlistment.

Through The Mill

Of course you've seen these trick movies, where the cameraman makes the patsy a nerve-shattered passenger in a car that goes shooting through traffic jams, just missing disaster by a hair-breadth every second. Well nothing happens to you, outside of a few chills and thrills when you are only figuratively transported into a car that is performing like that. But if you had been out on the St. Albert Trail Saturday night, you'd have been up against the real thing, according to evidence given by an efficient member of the scarlet riders of the plains.

A member of the Royal Mounted told the magistrate that the fellow standing in the prisoner's box had been pulling on a performance with a gas buggy on the main highway that would have put in the shade the average scene from a trick movie.

* * *

"He was weaving from one side of the road to the other," the officer explained to the court. "I was a marvel indeed that the driver was able to go so close to the ditch on each side and still maintain the vehicle in an upright position, the representative of the force that always "get their man," added in an admiring tone.

* * *

But instead of being commended for a feat of maneuvring that would have done credit to a trained circus driver, the accused will spend the next 10 days in the Fort Saskatchewan jail. It seems that the fancy driving hadn't been in the least premeditated. As a matter of fact old Lady Luck who looks after fools and inebriates had been right on the job Saturday night. The daredevil driver admitted he had been pretty well snooted up and of course there's only one thing the court can do in such cases—impose a jail term.

* * *

Another man who didn't have such good luck as a trick driver, but ended up with a head on collision, had hearing of his case adjourned until June 10. He was also charged with being intoxicated while behind the wheel of his car.

Faith In Future of Canada Needed Old Timers Told

One of the most immediate and pressing tasks of the Canadian people is to instil in the coming generations a wholesome appreciation of the land in which they live, a respect for its institutions and a faith in its future, stated Rev. McElroy Thompson, minister of Metropolitan United church, at the annual church service of the Northern Alberta Pioneers' and Old-Timers' Association Sunday evening.

The service was attended by a large number of members of the pioneer association from the city and from the outlying districts of Edmonton.

Speaking on "Canada and its Destiny", the minister stated that history has shown that no nation and no race ever became great until some great unifying principle bound them together, until some common loyalty over-ruled and submerged their lesser loyalties.

TWO FORCES

"There are, and always have been, forces at work in our national and racial life. These forces must be understood and dealt with before we can become a united and prosperous people. Those forces," he said, "are of two kinds; natural and artificial."

Of the natural factors, there are two main forces which make for division, the first our extended geographical area which has kept the people of the provinces apart and made it individual and national problems. The second cause of disunity, Mr. Thompson said, is racial with representations from all parts of the world.

"Here, we must work out one racial strain," he maintained, "composed of the best element from all our nationalities, just as the United States are doing, and just as England did many years before."

The artificial factors causing division are the lack of a working policy acceptable to all sections of the province, the lack of political unity, which could be remedied by the working out of a form of government where governments will be elected by a majority of the voters and those elected will serve the national interest, rather than the interest of special groups. The third artificial factor causing division in the country is religious, he said.

MORAL ISSUES

"The religious forces of the country," said Mr. Thompson, "have never yet been able to speak with a united voice or make an united impact on any of the great moral issues of the day. Certainly, if the church of Christ is to achieve moral unity in this country, she will have to first learn how to speak with one voice on the moral issues of the day."

The pioneers of the Dominion, he said, must go on being pioneers. Instead of invading and conquering new lands, they must invade and conquer new territories of mind and heart, he told the association members. "The same spirit of courage and sacrifice, the same willingness to break with the past must again go into action, as they did to establish and achieve unity and become a land where decency and honor, good will and tolerance, freedom and justice prevail."

Rev. Alex Stewart, chaplain of the association, assisted the minister during the service.

ONE IS HELD FOR THEFT IN SAFE ROBBERY

Strong-Box Taken From City Premises And $200 Is Removed

Forcing entry to the premises of the Maytag Washing Machine Co., Ltd., 10359 Jasper Avenue, at an early hour Monday, held thieves removed a safe containing approximately $200 in cash and cheques. The safe was found near 118 avenue and 149 street, with the front battered in, by police Monday morning.

CHARGED WITH THEFT

Konrad Fritz was arrested at a rooming house on 104 street by Det Sgt. Berl Petheram and Det. Murdo Munro late in the morning and charged with the robbery. The accused man was in bed when the detectives entered his room, after following up clues found near the abandoned safe.

Police also brought a sedan car alleged to have been used in the robbery, to the police station, along with a double-bitted axe and some other tools found in the car.

Det. Insp. John Leslie took personal charge of the investigation following discovery of the abandoned safe by employees of the Hazelwood Dairy at 6 a.m. Monday. Head of the detective department, assisted by Det. Sgt. Petheram and Detectives Murdo Munro, Frank Kingsett and Chris Shaw, proceeded immediately to the dairy.

In the bush there was found the opened safe, with the door battered in by some heavy instrument. Searching in the grass the detectives found one ten dollar bill, that the robber had apparently dropped on his way when the door came open. The officers also found two or three cheques.

LOOK FOR CAR

Detectives then started looking for a certain type of car, as the result of information they secured from a man who said he found and then lost a few hours later to the arrest in the 104 street rooming house.

Police intimated they were searching the city for another suspect, as they are convinced that at least two persons were involved in the robbery. The safe was a small one, not weighing more than 75 pounds, and easily capable of being transported in the back seat of a car.

Burglary was discovered by Special Constable A. Parsons, who was on his regular beat in the down section of Jasper Avenue at about 1:05 a.m. Parsons noted that a window in the Maytag premises had been forcibly removed and the Yale lock on the door turned by reaching inside.

Constable R. B. Arcand, city police force, reported he had tried both front and rear doors of the premises at about 11:15 p.m. Sunday and both were fast at that time.

Citizens Remember Visit of Monarchs Here One Year Ago

Thousands of Edmontonians Sunday cast their memories back a year, to June 2, 1939, when Their Majesties King George and Queen Elizabeth visited this city and added yet one more triumph to their long list of conquests, as loyal subjects swelled this city's population from 90,000 to 200,000.

Scenes of enthusiasm without parallel in this city's history were enacted as the popular Royal couple smiled, bowed and chatted their way indelibly into the hearts of each and every one of the vast crowds that welcomed them at every turn.

And no doubt on occasions, Their Majesties cast their memories back to that unequalled scene of their trip, on Portage avenue — now Kingsway—where 70,000 cheering, flag-waving people of this city and district cheered them to the echo.

IN SHADOW OF WAR

Months of preparation and cohesive effort reached their climax with the visit of Their Majesties, a visit that was taken in the shadow of the earth-resounding events that have since come to pass.

Already the war was in the offing, its shadows creeping across the world to the extent that the powerful British battle cruiser Repulse, which had been selected to bring Their Majesties across the Atlantic was kept with the Home Fleet and the steamship Empress of Australia was commissioned as a royal yacht for the trip.

The cruiser Southampton, one of the two to convoy the "Empress" across, was slightly damaged in an early air raid.

The day on which Their Majesties visited this city was perfect—a typical warm, peerless Alberta summer day. Many thousands came in from surrounding districts. It was a day without parallel in Edmonton's history—the first time on which a reigning monarch had visited here.

At 3:30 p.m. on June 2 the Royal Blue train pulled into the C.N.R. station.

Wearing the uniform of commander-in-chief of the Royal Air Force, His Majesty, with Queen Elizabeth and their retinue immediately conquered the hearts of the vast assemblage.

UNEQUALLED DAY HERE

In rapid succession there followed the great reception at the station, the drive north on 101 street, the historic Kingsway drive, the visit to the legislative buildings with its many outstanding features, the visit to the University hospital, the drive back past the Cenotaph and the tremendously enthusiastic reception at the Macdonald, where thousands cheered to the echo as Their Majesties arrived, later appeared on the balcony and then drove to the station.

It was a day such as Edmonton had never seen before and may not see for a long time to come. But the devotion of Edmontonians, shown in a tangible way when the bugles called to arms from 1914-1918, was called forth once again. Their Majesties are receiving and will continue to receive, according to expressions heard on all sides, continued service, loyalty and devotion.

TWO MEN DROWN WHILE FISHING BENTLEY LAKE

Thrown into the water when their home-made boat capsized while they were fishing in Bentley Lake, 15 miles northeast of St. Paul, Sunday afternoon, John Turzanski, 55, and John Starorelski, 28, were drowned. The bodies were recovered by R. C. M. P. officers, according to a report received from the Edmonton detachment.

Turzanski is married and the father of several children. Starorelski was a single man.

Bentley Lake is a summer resort that is well patronized.

BIBLE INSTITUTE MEETINGS HALT DURING SUMMER

Suspension of meetings of the Edmonton Prophetic Bible Conference until the autumn season commences, was announced by Hon. Ernest C. Manning, minister of trade and industry, in his address to the conference Sunday evening. The meeting on Sunday evening was the last until further notice, when the fall season will commence.

Mr. Manning was assisted at the service by Mrs. Manning, Orvis A. Kennedy, secretary of the Alberta Social Credit League, and the Bible Conference quartette. Gordon Geldart, tenor, was soloist.

Mr. Manning dealt with the subject of the grace of faith in his address and described it as confidence in Christ, produced by individual, personal relationship to Him. He dealt with the three major failings of mankind which, he said, tended to destroy the atmosphere which enabled people to get the most out of life.

These failings he listed as inconsistency, insincerity and indifference.

In his inspirational talk he dealt with the essential bond of fellowship and emphasized the need of sympathetic understanding of the other fellow's problems.

During the service numbers sung included "Teach Us to Pray," "Behold Me Standing at the Door" and "God Be With You Till We Meet Again."

Aberhart Back From Winnipeg With Fallow

Premier William Aberhart returned to his office Monday after visiting Winnipeg, where he addressed the annual convention of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association. He was accompanied by Hon. W. A. Fallow, minister of public works.

He confirmed the announcement made here Sunday by Hon. Ernest C. Manning, minister of trade and industry, that meetings of the Edmonton Prophetic Bible Conference would be suspended until the fall.

It is expected that with his return the premier will turn renewed government attention to the study of the report of the Royal Commission which investigated the oil industry in this province.

Classes are held twice-weekly in a downtown building and about 50 persons are at present obtaining instruction in the international code. Kenneth Argue is secretary of the "Volunteer Wireless Instructors' Club."

CITIZENS GIVE BLANKETS FOR WAR REFUGEES

Appeal Of Red Cross Gets Hearty Response In District

Answering the appeal of the Red Cross society for blankets to be used in France for the 23,000 hospital beds for their own wounded and for the 5,000,000 refugees from devastated countries to the north who are now in France, Edmonton citizens have turned over a large supply of blankets to the various depots of the society here during the weekend, and more blankets are being received Monday.

Mrs. Richard Procter, supervisor of women's work in northern Alberta, stated that a large number of blankets had been turned in to the Tegler building depot, and 34 blankets, new and old, double and single, had been left at the special depot in the basement of the Cattistock block, 10315 Jasper avenue, and others at the Civic block depot.

Children of the Forest Heights schools are sending $10 worth of blankets purchased from money raised by the printing and sale of their school magazine.

W. J. Dick, chairman of the society's campaign committee, stated that he had received word from Sgt. R. C. Rathbone of the R.C.M.P. at Chipewyan, stating that a pair of H.B.C. blankets had been purchased by the citizens of the northern point, and were being sent to Edmonton by airways express. Sgt. and Mrs. Rathbone also provided a pair of blankets, as did Mr. and Mrs. Bud Pelton, northern trapper, a Mr. Pelton's partner, Mr. Amren, of Chipewyan. "It's really wonderful the way the Chipewyan people responded to aid in answering the appeal of the Red Cross," Sgt. Rathbone wrote to Mr. Dick.

More blankets are expected to be received by the society to aid in the invaluable war-work.

Fair And Warm Is Welcome Forecast After Wet Weather

Clouds cleared from the sky overnight and Monday morning citizens awoke to find the sun shining brightly from a cloudless sky. By 8:30 a.m. the mercury had risen to 55 above, while the barometric pressure was 27.52 increasing. The forecast for Edmonton is "fair and warm."

All points throughout the near north reported clear skies Monday morning. The only district reporting rain Sunday was Peace Coupe, where a heavy shower fell during the evening.

I.O.D.E. FIELD COMFORTS TO AID SOLDIERS

Institution by the Imperial Order of the Daughters of the Empire of a Field Comforts Fund, through which such desirable "dainties" as cigarettes, tobacco and chocolate are to be sent to members of the Canadian Active Service Force, has brought widespread favorable reaction among public and troops.

In their drive for comforts the I.O.D.E. has been successful in securing a quantity price of $2.50 per thousand on cigarette orders of 10,000 or more. This will enable the I.O.D.E. to extend their activities in this respect considerably.

The arrangements made with the cigarette manufacturers enable shipments of 10,000 or more cigarettes to go forward to commanding officers of units for distribution to their men, or to have the shipments divided into individual lots of 1,000 cigarettes or more and sent to special addresses in these quantities.

The Bulletin is happy to cooperate with the I.O.D.E. and will accept donations, which will be passed on to the organization and all donations so received, will be acknowledged in these columns.

Help The Kids

THE foundation to assure Edmonton of baseball in future years is being laid these days by the Edmonton Juvenile Baseball League under the direction of President Stan Meher and Secretary Bob Smith.

The circuit plans to open a regular schedule on June 27 and carry on throughout the summer months.

John "Lefty" Ducey, always an active supporter of any move to keep baseball flourishing among the kids, will help the new league along by running a short school for any one who wishes to umpire for the youngster's games.

This is a swell chance for any one hankering to be an umpire to pick up a lot of valuable pointers and needed experience. It will also be a boom to the league which needs umpires badly. The right sort of efficient job makes a ball game—and it makes good players too. If you are interested, get in touch with Ducey at Renfrew Park any evening there is a Central Alberta League game underway there, or phone Stan Meher at 81903.

Tuesday evening at 6.30 the West End Cardinals, one of the clubs in the Juvenile League, will hold a practice at the Municipal Golf Club diamond. Picking of players for the teams will start at this practice.

Old Junior League Pays Off

BACK a few years ago a bunch of far-seeing ball fans organized a junior baseball league for the city. Vic Horner, Dave Little, John Ducey and a handful of others worked hard on this loop and got nothing but grief out of it. But that work is paying off today. It it hadn't been done, we wouldn't have the framework of players here that made possible the present Central Alberta Baseball League and baseball would be dead and buried in these parts.

I'll go out and beat the drum any day for these organizations that give kids a chance to play and learn the game. Baseball is still our finest summer sport show. Once it gets into your system nothing will ever eliminate it. So far no one has devised a better way to spend a summer evening than by watching a good ball game.

But to keep the game up to par here, we have to keep the kids playing it and to do that we have to give them a little help in getting organized. Go on out around your neighborhood some evening, round up a gang of kids and get them playing "work-up"—just like you did when you were a kid. You'll get a big kick out of it and you'll probably be playing again yourself in a few minutes.

And here I tread on ground that is knee-deep in dynamite and indignant protests, but I'm going to wade in anshow. If you happen to be one of those men who like baseball and would like to see your youngster playing the game as well, or better, than you did, then for Heaven's sake help him to get a ball, glove and bat so that he can play.

Our schools have gone overboard for softball because it is the easiest and cheapest way to get the youngsters playing an organized game. Softball doesn't make a baseball player and never will, but it has just enough to satisfy a kid's normal urge to play ball. This is being written for the man who is interested in baseball and wants to see the game keep alive. If you yourself prefer softball, or don't give a hoot one way or the other, you needn't bother about the foregoing but will get your kicks out of hearing the crack of a stinging three-bagger or hearing a smoking pitch zip into a catcher's mitt, you'd better help shove along the road you prefer—or he'll likely take the easy one.

ARROWS SCORE 7-5 WIN OVER PONOKA

Bunch Hits to Gain Second Place in Loop

TWO-RUN attacks in the fourth and seventh innings behind effective hurling by Billy Lupul gave the Arrows a smart 7-5 win over Ponoka Stampeders in a Central Alberta Baseball League fixture at Renfrew Park on Sunday afternoon. The victory moved the Arrows up into second place in the league standings.

The bearded Stampeders opened with a blast of hitting that drove O'Donald, Arrows' starting pitcher, to the showers with only one out in the first inning. Ponoka punched home three runs on this barrage. Billy Lupul then went to the mound and shut off the invaders. In the ninth the Stampeders started a rally that netted them two runs and threatened the Arrows' lead.

Arrows	2	2	.500

Two fielding errors, a sacrifice by Cecil Lewis, a two-bagger by Pepcevich and a single by Parker gave Ponoka three runs in the first inning.

The Arrows came right back however in the first up in the last half of the inning when Pepcevich singled, Eric Dolighan walked, Mac Colville belted one for two bases and Catcher Sawchuk of Ponoka made a bum heave to third with two out.

The game rolled along scoreless until the last of the fourth when a single and steal by Beesley, a walk to McGill, a single by Kilburn and a long fly to left field by Billy Lupul sent Arrows two runs. The Ponoka mentionians added their other two runs in the last of the seventh on singles by Mac Colville and Brooks followed by a three-bagger by Oneal.

STIRRING RALLY

With one out in the ninth, Ponoka started a stirring rally when Bill Sutherland, replacing Bires at second base, slashed a single through the infield and scored when Clarke followed up with a double. Chapman sacrificed to score Clarke. Cecil Lewis grounded out, however, and Sutherland skipped a high fly to second base.

Van Graflan Tells 'Em

The above is an action picture just received of Roy Van Graflan in woody action as an umpire in the International Baseball League. Newark is being bawled out in the above shot for daring to dispute a Van Graflan dictum. The scene is at Toronto where the Leafs beat the Bears 5-1. Coach Percy Page and the Grads will take particular interest in this picture since Van Graflan is the grand mogul of the Rochester Filarets—the girl basketeers whose claims to the Grads' titles recently caused so much rumpus.

Tower Bridge Breaks Back In Race Opener

WINNIPEG, June 3—Jockey A Sylvester remained in hospital here today for examination following a four-horse spill in the second race of the opening day card at Whittier Park race track Saturday. He is believed to have a broken collarbone.

R. Warren, jockey of one of the other horses involved, suffered a cracked rib, the other jockeys, J. McLaren and A. Holliday were unhurt.

Tower Bridge, a three-year-old making its first race in public, broke its back and died on the track. The horse was owned by the Eaton Stable of Alix, Alta. Bore Heath, Sable Flag and Valdina Lad, the other horses involved in the spill, were not injured.

Callies Defeat Scona United 4-1; Young Smart Boots All for Winners

SMART, young Callie centre, lived up to his name as the Edmonton Senior Soccer League opened Saturday evening at Clarge Stadium. His club beat Scona United 4-1—and Smart booted in all four Callie goals himself.

Both teams fielded strong elevens. The weather was unseasonably cool, but the field was in fine condition.

The Callies started off with a rush and within two minutes were a goal up. Kerr cleared the ball from the left wing. Smart met the ball on the drop and Carter was beaten. The goal gave the Callies confidence and they kept the Scona defence hemmed in their own end.

Snaw and Smitten guarded Carter well but after ten minutes play Smart, who popped a high fly to second base.

SCONA RALLIES.

Scona, two goals down, fought back after this reverse and it was the Callies who had to defend. Over eagerness on the part of the Scona Side forwards, spoiled some fine chances. McGlynn was not seriously tested. Scona kept up the pressure and at the end of twenty-five minutes were rewarded with a goal. Pendry sent a ball through the centre. E. Scott, following up, outstripped the Callies' defense to shoot hard and true into the net, just inside the post.

Both teams were travelling at a fast pace but neither defence were giving much away. Carter made a couple of great saves just before the interval. Campbell and McAra being on the mark with good shots.

Half-time score: Callies 2, Scona 1.

SECOND HALF

On resuming, Scona made a great bid to level the score but McGlynn and company were giving nothing away. Steve Olander was a tower of strength to the Scots at this time, clearing, tackling and passing in confident style.

After 15 minutes play the Callies went further ahead. Olander carried the ball down field, beat a couple of opponents, then passed into the centre. Smart, like a flash was on the ball, and before the defense could close in, he had the ball in the net.

TOUGH BREAK.

Scona were still putting up a good game but their shooting was weak around the goal. P. James had to leave the field with leg injury, leaving Scona with ten men. This was a big handicap to the South Side as every man was needed to cope with the clever Soot forwards.

Ten minutes from full time the Scots scored No. 4. Sutherland, Campbell and Kerr on the left flank were full of running and from one of their combination plays the ball slipped to Smart again, that player without hesitation whipped the ball into the net.

Both teams slowed down near the end as the pace was beginning to tell on the players.

Final score: Callies 4, Scona 1.

GRADS RALLY TO DEFEAT CHICAGO ACES 56-34

Invaders Swamped By Last Period Drive

By JACK KELLY
Edmonton Bulletin Sports Editor

EDMONTON GRADS opened their final basketball series with a rousing 56-34 victory against the Chicago Aces here Saturday night before the customary week-end crowd of around 2,500 fans. The second game will be tonight and the third on Wednesday evening.

Overhauled by the brilliant Chicago girls early in the first quarter, the Grads trailed behind in the scoring until nearly half-time when a sudden burst of deadly shooting by Northup and Brown put them back in front. From then on, the world champions began to click. They were never tied again but did not pile up their decisive margin until the final quarter when they out-scored the invaders 17-2.

Members of bygone Grad teams, assembled from all parts of Canada for the winding up of their world-famous organization this week, had a special row of ringside seats at one end of the playing floor. Margaret MacBurney, the famous Doris Neale, Babe Belanger and Elsie Benny are among the veterans who have already arrived in Edmonton. It was a big night for the girls as they hugged each other and cut up old scores in a big chat-fest.

BRILLIANT CHECKING

The Chicago squad checked the Grad machine almost to a standstill in the first half with one of the finest displays of defensive basketball seen here in a long time. The invaders out-scored the world champs 12-8 in the first quarter.

In the second quarter the Grads began to find themselves and solve the Chicago defence system. Edmonton led the scoring in this period 16-9. Play was equally close in the third frame with the Grads scoring 15 to Chicago's 11.

As usual, field accuracy gave the Grads their victory. They dropped 26 shots through the hoop out of 63 tries for an average of 41 per cent —one of the highest they have ever recorded in such a major series.

CHICAGO AVERAGE 20.8

Against this sensational sniping the Chicago girls scored 15 field baskets out of 72 attempts for an average of only 20.8 per cent. The penalty shot accuracy of the two teams was even at approximately 25 per cent.

Two Grads scored a full 50 per cent of their field shots to top all in accuracy. Etta Dann bagged five out of 10, while Kay MacRitchie got two out of four. Sophie Brown was the leading scorer with eight field baskets out of 17 tries, while Mabel Munton McCloy got four out of nine.

Betty Bawden's accuracy was actually the best of all—a perfect 100 per cent. She got away only one field shot during the comparatively short time she was on the floor, but she made it count for two points.

Following is the detailed box score:

SIMPLICITY MARKS SERVICE FOR "WEE SCOT"

GRAND FORKS, B.C., June 3—Funeral services were held here Sunday for Duncan "Mickey" MacKay, one of hockey's all-time stars who died in an automobile accident at Ymir, B.C., last Thursday.

Hundreds of friends filled St. John United church to pay last tribute to the "Wee Scot" from Chesley, Ont., who came to British Columbia a quarter of a century ago to skate his way into the hearts of hockey fans.

Simplicity marked the United church ritualistic service read by Rev. Thomas Keyworth.

A large cortege of automobiles wound through the streets to Evergreen cemetery where interment took place.

Floral tributes came from all parts of the country from friends who had watched Mickey's rise to stardom with Vancouver Millionaires of the old Pacific Coast Professional Hockey League.

Besides his widow and daughter Geraldine here, the former star centreman left two brothers, Kenneth of Cranbrook, B.C., and Neil of Kincardine, Ont., who came here for the funeral.

Mrs. Edmund Huet of Montreal and Mrs. J. McDowell of Shawville, Que., are sisters.

Calgary Golfers Lift Eaton Challenge Trophy

ANCHORED here for so long that the citizens considered it a sort of permanent fixture, the Eaton challenge golf trophy was at last boosted out of Edmonton on Sunday afternoon when Stan Leonard and Wilder Ripley of Calgary Golf and Country Club defeated the Martell brothers two up at the Highlands Club.

Although Edmonton golfers had nothing but the deepest sort of respect for the golf ability of Leonard and Ripley, few considered that they would be able to turn the trick of beating the Martells on their own difficult home course.

The cold, raw weather tightened up muscles and prevented the calibre of play from becoming sensational. Leonard's par 35 on the first nine, along with Ripley's par on the last nine were the best performances on the card.

Following are the scores against par:

Par—Out—
Ripley	5	4	3
Leonard	4	5	4
B. Martell	5	5	4
H. Martell	5	5	4
Par—In—
Ripley	4	4	4
Leonard	4	5	4

CAST OF CHARACTERS

ROSSY McAFEE, went to college to play baseball, get an education, and settle a feud.

JUDY TOLLIVAR, daughter of Lincoln College's president.

HANNAH SHRIDER, hillbilly girl who followed Rossy to college.

Yesterday: Rossy's brawl with Hannah threatens to bring down reprimands of school authorities upon them, but Judy arranges to save the affair together. She pleads with Rossy to remember he has come to school to get an education. He questions her about her father's history. She explains, but Rossy still believes Dr. Tollivar is the man who killed his father.

CHAPTER V

ROSSY McAFEE went out for basketball, just to keep in training while waiting for the baseball season to open. But he was not much on the floor. He made the scrub team. But every day he warmed up with old Leacock, who kept them on and helped to develop the pitchers.

Leacock had once been with the Giants and he knew his hillbillies. Hell'n-Damnation had sent at least three men to the big time, and a dozen to the other lower leagues. Some enzyme in the ground there grew baseball stars and feudin'.

After a while, Rossy settled down in his new life. He could eat in public without starting a riot, and Judy had kept the secret of his and Hannah's fight, as far as anyone knew.

One day he said to Coach Hurd: "I got to get off, Coach."

"What for? How come?"

"I want to go home. Could I get off Friday and come back maybe by noon Monday?"

"Bub, you go back in them hills and hollers and somebody will ambush a good prime secondhand star pitcher."

"I know how to dodge ambushes. I know all the trails."

"Okay. You been here a month now?"

"Five weeks."

"I'll lay flowers on your grave and croon a sad yodel over the mound. So long."

Rossy took the bus to Mountain City. From there he got the mail hack out to Mint's Creek postoffice. From Pappy Mint he rented the loan of a mule that knew the stony roads and trails. He left the campus at 6 o'clock Friday and at 4 o'clock that afternoon he was jogging up a valley toward his mountain home.

Where the shadowy bridle trail came out on top of a mountain, he came to the picnic grounds and open land which formed the diamond next to Ebenezer church and school house. "Whoa!" Rossy said, and slipped from his mule.

There was a crude grandstand covered with dry brush, and Rossy went there and sat down, dropping into reverie. All at once that day flooded back upon him—the grounds were filled with folks; the McAfees and Tollivers were out in force. Although Ebenezer was playing Cardover school, over the mountain, actually it was a game between the families. The Tollivers against the McAfees.

The feud was dozing but not sleeping. The past fall there had been a great camp meeting at Ebenezer, and all the parsons and exhorters were out in force to get the old heads of the clans to bury the hatchet. And so successfully had they labored in the vineyard that actually peace had been declared between the families.

It was a peculiar peace, where bitter hate seemed to have been swallowed in athletic rivalry.

Actually, of course, hate and distrust and grudge smoldered just beneath the surface of all this high fun and carryings on. Rossy remembered it all. He remembered it as only a child of seven can remember with vivid eyes. Young as he was, he sensed the excitement and undercurrent of family bod feeling.

The young pitcher on the mound was a Tolliver. "Sock" Tolliver, they called him. A handsome, dark fellow. Not much was known about him, except that he had a mighty pitching arm, and when he was wild he couldn't hit a flock of barns with a long rifle.

Today he started out wild. Amidst the yelling of "Play Ball!" and the hubbub of the occasion, plus the Fourth of July spirit, and plenty of prime moonshine, he walked the first two men to face him, and even now Rossy could recollect the ferocious joy of his folks as his own father walked to the plate with the solid hickory bat that Jay McAfee had made with his own hand.

At the first pitched ball Jay McAfee stepped forward a pace to connect with a wild pitch, and he hit that ball with a crack like a rifle shot.

"Foul!" yelled the umpire.

Jay grinned and returned to the plate. "Just one little strike, Sock!" he pleased. "And don't crack my skull with a bean ball!"

The ball came over. Rossy saw his father try to dodge it. It must have been a deep and confusing curve, for he couldn't avoid getting hit.

The bystanders, almost suffocating the squirming man on the ground, were pushed back by a deputy sheriff who was present. "Stand back!" he yelled. "Give him air! Here—you two," he pointed out two men. "Tote him back of the grandstand, yon."

Rossy's mother was screaming. A shout went up for blood. While the two men carried the unconscious man into the sheltered shade back of the stand, faction leaders directed attention from Jay McAfee by crying:

"Grab him before he hulls out!"

A mob started toward the stunned pitcher, still standing in the box. Rossy, hardly realizing all that was happening, had seen Cousin Steve in the stand a moment before, but when he looked again Steve seemed to have slid through a loose plank in the grandstand and disappeared. The two men came out to see what was happening to the pitcher, leaving the unconscious man alone.

The pitcher gave one wild look at the advancing partisans, and as if it were his legs and not his wishes that moved him, he fled in the direction of a growth of trees and bushes at the far edge of the grounds. The men yelled and shouted, following at a run. There were two or three shots fired.

The last they saw of Socks Tolliver was his hat, lying where it fell when he dived under cover and was gone. There was a steep cliff at this point, and a man said he saw Sock jump off and sink among the tree-tops below.

As the baffled mob returned, there were those who said they saw another Sock Tolliver go tearing off in a somewhat different direction and disappear in the same way. Later they figured that was reported by some one who had laved his thirst with too much mountain dew.

For almost all this while Jay McAfee had been just lying there in the green brush that had fallen off the roof of the grandstand. Now they brought water and poured on his face, found that the skull was actually cracked. A horse doctor said the ball had hit and bounced for there were plain marks indicating a kind of double lick that could never be wholly accounted for. But the game, instead of settling the clans into good feelings, reopened the war and it was not to cease for another 10 years.

Three days later McAfee died.

Rossy waked as from a dream and returned home. He came to a solid square log cabin in old trees and vines, where a bent mother waited for him. "That you, son?"

"It's me," Rossy said, and let the mule in the lot. He came and kissed his mother.

Supper was waiting, and they went in to the table of hot smoked sausage, honey, salt-rising bread, and coffee with cream as thick as yellow paint. Rossy said the grace, and for once he was consciously thankful for these gifts.

"I got your letter saying you'd come, son, if you could get off. You Cousin Steve fetched it from the postoffice, and he said he wanted to see you and spit as not he'll be here pretty soon."

Steven Hogg appeared shortly after Rossy had finished supper and lighted a cigaret. He was a thick-bodied man, all of 10 years Rossy's senior. His mother and Rossy's father were half-brother and sister, so Hogg was not really all McAfee, in a way; he was not McAfee at all, although always he professed to espouse the hates and prejudices and loves and bloodbonds of the McAfee tribe.

Now he was living on lands that once had been thought to belong to Rossy's father. But he was generous with his substance; it was Steve Hogg who encouraged Rossy to finish high school, to play ball, and even to go away to college. Now he mentioned that.

"Well, I told you you'd like it, bub, didn't I? How'd you come on?"

"Okay," Rossy said, watching his cousin, and thinking of what Hannah had said about Hogg asking her to marry him. The man was a bachelor.

"Whilst you was up here, Rossy," Steve Hogg said, sinking his voice low so the gaunt woman in the kitchen could not overhear, "I thought I'd better name a thing or two to you. Things maybe you'd better know. It's about this here man who heads up that there college down there."

"You mean Lincoln College?"

"That's right, Tollivar. Well, he's up in the world. A high and mighty, you mout say. Just the same he's still just one of these here Hell'n-Damnation Tollivers, even though he spells hit with a instead of e. You can trim the haid off the tail of a jackass but he stays a mule right on. Rossy. That's what this man has tried to do.

"But he's the feller that beanballed your paw the first of the game, and here's how I know it for a fack."

He began to tell as strange a yarn as Rossy had ever heard about the whole strange mess.
